MATINEE GIRL

With one voice, one mind and one heart we frail feminine creatures who fill three-fourths of the playhouse seats and who preserve the sacred function of the box-office have adjudged H. B. Irving to be the worthy son of a revered sire. One sees in the young man glimpses of the marked personality of his venerated father. He has the same dark and melancholy countenance, softened by an innate gentleness, as a grim landscape by sunshine. His eyes are deep set, his chin long and strong, his cheek bones high, his eyebrows heavy and straight. His figure is spare, his shoulders flat, his legs lean. The inward gesture of the clenched hand upon the turbulent breast is Sir Henry Irving's own. In moments of excitement the staccato delivery and singular intonations of the sire reappear with lesser force in the son. But they are mellowed by youth and by the young man's efforts at elision of the family mannerisms. Occasionally his enunciation is faulty, blurred by haste and passion. But these are slight flaws in a whole of sincerity, of strength, of simplicity. H. B. Irving's Giovanni in Stephen Phillips' Paola and Francesca is a splendid figure of the Middle Ages, dark with superstition, with the cruelty of power unrestrained, and yet touched with a great love and marvelous gentleness, shown when the murderer stoops to kiss upon the foreheads tenderly, parentally, those whom he has murdered, and murmurs over them sadly: "They are like little children who have fallen asleep."

More than once he moves to tears, or at least to the most hardened of theatregoers a stealthy resort to the handkerchief, and Henry Irving himself says that to make one laugh or cry is the test of acting. Furthermore, he never fails to interest. However, the keen and learned critics may choose to judge him H. B. Irving will please the sex that support the theatres. Women will accept him first for his father's sake, last for his own. H. B. Irving did not need to be the son of the greatest of modern English actors to be himself as one of the greatest.

On every matinee lip these October days is the glad cry, "Lucky little Frances Starr!" It is varied sometimes by "Pretty little Frances Starr!" and "Clever little Frances Starr!" but it ends with the pleasing name in an inflection of positive friendliness. We remember her as a charmingly appealing daughter of Barwig in The Music Master for nearly half of that exquisite play's remarkable run in New York. One day we left our much trod Broadway and went to the Murray Hill Theatre in the old stock days under Henry Connelly's able management. There we saw a fluffy-haired girl, with an intelligent face and big, star-like eyes, play Dorothy Neville in Sheridan, the Maid from Bath, and there we adopted Frances Starr as our own. She's a little up-State girl, scarcely past twenty, the history of whose career is comprised in the legend, "Pluck is stronger than Poverty."

She passes under the tutelage of the great actress maker, David Belasco, a girl of nimble intelligence and abundant temperament, receptivity and responsiveness, with taste and poise and balance, prettiness and youth. Expectantly and with a thousand hopes we will watch her evolution under the master hand.

In your plastic state, dear Frances, take unto yourself this truth, that gratitude is a great and admirable quality.

I am tired of Mrs. Langtry. Brought up upon traditions of her marvelous beauty, I saw her in The Degenerates, tried to fan a flame of esthetic, if not of dramatic appreciation, and failed. Last week I worked myself into a most receptive and open-minded mood and went to Keith and Proctor's to see her in the sublicid drama, From Nightfall to Light. I saw a rather heavy English woman, with a wide smile, the expression of health rather than a fluid spirit of alert mind; a woman with a fine though heavy profile and a vacuous front face; a woman palpably middle-aged, who wore the most elegant and becoming English gown I had ever seen. Then I turned a lorgnette that was entirely willing to be convinced upon the alleged actress. In a play that might have been made in the hands of a Mrs. Fiske, a Bertha Kalich, a Virginia Harned, a Margaret Anglin a torrential drama of primitive human emotions, or in a presentment by Julia Marlowe or Maude Adams a heart-wringing twenty minutes of subdued grief, a play that might have been a tremendous human exhibit of the primal emotions unleashed, this visitor left one utterly unmoved, distinctly bored, finally irritated by the mathematical movements and automatic gestures that a few purblind persons have called grace. To drink tea with Mrs. Langtry, I have been told, is to love her. But I haven't drunk tea with her, and the social charm and expansive smile that makes slaves of her afternoon guests is lost somewhere about the footlights or the heads of the hard-working orchestra. I am tired of Mrs. Langtry.

More than maiden, more than wife,
More than love and next to life, even as Roushan the Robber loved his horse, Arthur Stringer loves his farm at Windsor, Ont. He has been tarrying there since May and is long overdue in the city, but with a poet's delightful inconsequence he sends a friend this letter, upon the date of his return, but inclosing some apple blossoms plucked from his own apple trees in his own beloved dooryard:

"You may think, you may even dare to say, that I am a poor farmer, but I have an apple tree in full bloom up here on the first of October. How's that for nature getting a hump on? As I put these blossoms in this envelope they are fresh and sweet and take our thoughts back to Spring. When they reach you I fear they will be faded and all their perfume gone."

Out on the Pacific Coast lives a fair maid who deigns to read this column and even to believe certain portions thereof. She read a paragraph about a young leading woman who achieved popularity in a stock company in New York last season. When her father, who happens to be a Pacific Coast manager, was leaving for New York to engage a company for his new theatre she handed him a memorandum. It contained the name of the young woman of the paragraph. Opposite she had written, "for leading woman." "Bring her back, papa," she said. "Don't come back without her."

"All right, daughter," replied the well brought up parent.

He obeyed orders, returning in two weeks with the leading woman and her mother. The leading woman is duplicating her New York popularity and the daughter is completing her father's training by the reminder, "I told you so."

The moral of this little story is: "Managers obey your daughters." Or, "Family government still exists, but it has been transferred to the children." In another generation or two we will rear parents to whom we can point with pride.

What's in a name? Common sense, taste, a sense of appropriateness, if nothing more. A stage name should be simple and possess individuality. If it have a romantic flavor of locality or other association, as, for instance, Miss Illington's nom de stage, which is a compound of portions of the name of her home city, Bloomington, and State, Illinois, so much the better. Lucia Nola, the comic opera singer, has a euphonious name by which she has proven her talent for selection. She is entitled to the Lucia, for her mother gave it her the day of her birth, the name of her own favorite opera. But when the babe had passed through the chrysalis stages of infancy and girlhood and was about to go upon the stage the question of a stage name confronted her. Her own surname, Levy, she did not wish to contest nor confuse with Miss Ethel Levy, and concluded to abandon it, but for what?

Miss Lucia Levy was born in New Orleans. She believes that it is the most beautiful, the most poetic, the most wholly satisfying town in the world. Diademmed in her fancy with a thousand virtues and beauties, she loves it as the early Roman loved his Rome. When, therefore, she was casting about for an appropriate stage name, one which should have the qualities of simplicity, appropriateness and personal association, she recalled the city's name:

"New Orleans, Louisiana," she mused, dwelling upon the liquid syllables as a mother upon the features of her babe. With the musing came a light into the darkness of nomenclature.

"'N' for New, 'O' for Orleans," she reflected. "'La' for Louisiana." She wrote the abbreviations for her city and State in sequence. They formed one of the neatest names on the American stage. Dramatically she christened herself Lucia Nola.

Georgie Drew Mendum has been taken to the bosom of theatregoing Chicago. James O'Donnell Bennett, to whose utterances that portion of Chicago listens as to the voice of a prophet, says of her in The Time, the Place and the Girl: "This young actress is, like all the members of the histrionic house to which she belongs, a born entertainer, possessed of an instinctive gift for getting all there is out of a line or a situation. Her style is droll, brisk, and original, her comedy a little hard-fisted and sharp, but the more pungent for that; her pantomime swift and eloquent, and sometimes, when she makes an appeal to the emotions, she reaches the heart with a curious, fleeting touch of poignancy that is true and fine. In the delivery of the humorous lines of the play she was fluent and smart. Miss Mendum is rather gaunt and very big-eyed, like all the Drews. Her face is singularly mobile, and she often twists it into ludicrous grimace, but she is not incapable of mirroring a mood of pensive sweetness. Miss Mendum can extract the double meaning from a line with neatness and dispatch and without seeming half to try. With the musical comedy public—a public that has a weakness for accounting itself fly—this neat, brisk style of delivery is estimated as little less than genius, and a player's possession of it is sufficient to make his or her reputation. Willie Collier is an instance and Miss Mendum is Willie Collier's stage sister."

The announcers on the yap wagons that patrol New York in search of sights and sounds unaccustomed to the strangers that occupy them are wicked triflers with the truth. One of them bawled as he passed Madison Square Garden:

"Crowning the tower of this magnificent structure is the statue of Diana, posed by Maggie Cline."

May Robson says women are poor creatures who require a weapon of defense. The Earl of Yarmouth heard her say so and while she was in England recently he gave her such a weapon. It is the most insulting and all around insolent umbrella in New York. It is all silk and of fast black and of eminently proper size. Its handle alone is terrifying and reprehensible. That is an admirably enameled donkey head that works automatically, and when an unthinking man leers at the owner of the umbrella said donkey flattens its ears, opens its eyes and mouth, and confounds every man within sight or hearing.

We girls would be happier if Charles Dalton and Elizabeth Kennedy were called for rehearsal of the king's name in Mizpah. We don't care especially whether the name that sounds like chewing gum stuck between unskilled jaws should be pronounced "A-hash-you-air-us" or "A-hash-your-us," but for euphony's sake let us have unanimity.

THE MATINEE GIRL.

ARCHIBALD COWPER DEAD.

Archibald Cowper, at one time prominent in the support of Lawrence Barrett and the elder Salvini, died early Tuesday morning, Oct. 2, at the home of Mrs. Cowper (Eleanor Merron), "The Thistles," in Middletown, N. Y. Mr. Cowper was born in England and came to America in 1876 to play Talbot Champneys in Our Boys, opening at the Globe Theatre, Boston. During the next two years he was a member of the Union Square Stock company. In the late eighties and early nineties he was at different times in the support of the elder Salvini, Fanny Davenport, Clara Morris, and Lawrence Barrett. Among Mr. Cowper's chief roles were Maurice Lavigne in Magnolia, Horace Holmcroft in The New Magdalen, Lord Woodstock in Lady Cancarty, Beauseant in The Lady of Lyons, Don Fernando in The Outlaw, Young Armytage in Lights o' London, Vicompte de Trevelac in La Tosca, and Cassio in Othello. Mr. Cowper had been in failing health for the last fifteen years, and since 1896 had been totally blind.

During the long period of his illness and incapacity Mr. Cowper most fortunately had the best of care—indeed, much closer and effective attention than could have been given him in any institution provided especially for such an invalid—through the offices of Mrs. Cowper, and there is no doubt that this devoted attention greatly prolonged his life.

The funeral services were held at the First Presbyterian Church of Middletown on the morning of Oct. 3, the Rev. Walter Rockwood Ferris taking charge. After the church service, as the deceased was a member of the Masonic fraternity, the impressive rites of that order were celebrated at the grave. William H. Sheeley, master of New York Lodge, 330, of which the deceased was a member, was present from New York to conduct the ceremony, accompanied by a delegation from his lodge, and a delegation from Hoffman Lodge, of Middletown, also participated, the interment being in Hillside Cemetery, Middletown. The obsequies, in fact, were dignified and impressive, and fitly marked the last exit of this once popular actor.

WISE POLICY FOR TRAVELING ATTRACTIONS.

Readers of THE MIRROR cannot have failed to note the frequency with which expressions like "pleased a small audience" have appeared in its correspondence columns during the present season. It indicates that an unusually large number of traveling attractions are making good in every respect except the box-office. The performances "please," but they do not "draw." There is a remedy, simple but sure, which THE MIRROR has already taken occasion to point out, and as truth loses none of its value from repetition no harm and perhaps much good may be done by again drawing attention to THE MIRROR'S "remedy for bad business." The impression which prevails in the cities and towns along the route ahead of an attraction is the invisible power that creates good or bad business. If the local public gains the impression that the coming performance is good it will turn out in paying numbers, but if it is distrustful or even uninformed it may be counted on to stay away, and no amount of flashy paper or laudatory press matter of the stock variety will overcome it. Even past reputation is not always enough to insure large houses, as the public throughout the country has been so often deceived in this respect that it is suspicious on principle. This is the age of the Missouri idea: The public must be shown. How to do this in the most economical manner is the point to be considered. THE MIRROR recommends the use of space regularly and systematically in its advertising columns. Let the traveling manager run a permanent advertisement, changing it each week and displaying pointed extracts from the criticisms of the local press where his attraction has appeared, together with the personal indorsements of local managers. These pithy advertisements, read week after week by the house managers, attaches and others in the towns ahead, cannot fail to create the proper impression in those towns. The great mass of theatregoing people no longer form their opinions wholly from posters, heralds and stock press notices. They ask their local manager or some other well-posted individual, frequently the local MIRROR correspondent, and upon this information, in which they have confidence, they base their decision. In this way the advance impression so vital to success is created. The wise manager whose attraction is not bringing him in so much money as he wants will do well to communicate at once with THE MIRROR advertising department.

THE SOCIAL WHIRL MAY CONTINUE.

Judge Lacombe, in the United States Circuit Court, on Oct. 2, refused to grant the injunction asked by W. S. Hull, as the assignee of Charles W. Doty, restraining the Shuberts from producing The Social Whirl pending the trial of the suit instituted by Hull. Doty says he is the author of A Winning Girl, which, it is charged, the Shuberts whipped into The Social Whirl, and insists that the managers interpolated both musical numbers and dialogue when the comedy was rewritten, without his consent.

The Shuberts asserted that all the changes were made with the author's knowledge. Mr. Hull declared further that the Shuberts had not paid the royalties due. The latter proved that they had tendered the royalties, under their interpretation of the contract, and they were refused.

Judge Lacombe in refusing the temporary injunction did so upon the ground that the testimony concerning the payment and refusal of the royalties was conflicting. The right to renew the motion in case the royalties were not paid was granted. In the meantime, the Shuberts will continue to produce the play.

THE ONE WOMAN PRODUCED.

The One Woman, dramatized from the novel of the same name by Thomas Dixon, Jr., was produced at Norfolk, Va., on Oct. 1. Gretchen Dale and Austin Webb appeared in the leading roles of Ruth and Mort Overman.

REFLECTIONS

A theatre in Odessa, Russia, where a local Hebrew company played, was lately destroyed by fire. A professor and two students perished in the flames.

General Manager B. F. Albee has secured from Harrison Grey Fiske the exclusive right to make stock company presentations of Leah Kleschna in New York. The play will be put on at Keith and Proctor's 125th Street Theatre about Nov. 1 with the original scenery.

Upton Sinclair, author of "The Jungle" and co-worker with Margaret Mayo in the dramatization of the book, has decided to try his hand at acting, and will be seen as Ostrinsky, a young Lithuanian, when the play is produced.

The Ragged Messenger is said to be a powerful play. Creston Clarke as the Rev. John Morton is making a hit in the part. As Mary Ainsleigh, Miss Virginia Thornton is a close second for honors and applause. John Carter as Bigland and Agnes Herndon as Mrs. Tailhurst carry their parts with vim. As Griffith, the detective, Fred W. Huntley does very clever work, and the same might be said of the Dr. Colbeck of J. A. Munn. The villain, Bert Carpenter, is carried with earnestness by T. N. Heffron, and Marcus La Blanche appears successfully as George Partington (Russell Sage). Bessie Edmond as Sarah Partington completes a well balanced cast.

Kenneth Davenport was called upon Wednesday evening to assume the role of Thomas Smith, Jr., in Clothes, replacing Douglas Fairbanks, who was needed for his original part in As Ye Sow. Mr. Davenport went on with but one rehearsal and acquitted himself with much credit.

Francis Powers has been engaged as general stage director for Bellows and Gregory, and is now in personal charge of the department of plays and productions. Louis Hallett has been engaged by the same firm as assistant and general representative.

Fritzi Scheff and her entire company attended the first Wednesday matinee performance of The Red Mill at Wallack's on Oct. 3.

Evelyn Carrington resumed the part of Queen Vashti in Mizpah on Oct. 1, and May Anderson appeared as Hargartha in place of Louise Rial.

The opening of The Love Letter, in which Virginia Harned is to appear at the Lyric Theatre, has been postponed from Oct. 8 to Oct. 9.

Bernard Shaw's Captain Brassbound's Conversion, with Ellen Terry, will come to the Empire Theatre in January.

Frederick Perry will appear as the student hero, and George Fawcett as the political leader in George Bronsburst's new play, The Man of the Hour.

Cape Cod Folks, Liebler and Company's production, which opened in Boston six weeks ago, will begin its New York engagement at the Academy of Music on Monday, Oct. 15.

The children now appearing on the stage in the Broadway theatres were the guests of the managers of the Pure Food Show at the St. Nicholas Rink last Thursday afternoon.

The 400th performance of The Lion and the Mouse will be given at the Lyceum Theatre on Oct. 30.

The Vanderbilt Cup will be at the Grand Opera House Thanksgiving week.

Among the graduates of the Stanhope-Wheatcroft Dramatic School who have secured engagements this season are the following: Isabel Gould, with Arizona; Florence Fisher, with The One Woman; Florence Fay Davidson, with Helen's Babies; Marion Manners, with The Pride of New York; Olga Graham, with David Carson; Violet Cassidy, with At Cozy Corners; Maurice Norman, with Viola Allen; John Corrigan, with James O'Neil; Ivor Lowrie, with The One Woman; Warren Dahler, with The Toast of the Town; Eugene E. Bradley, with At Cozy Corners; Harry Schley, with We Are King; Charles Sweet, with The Girl Patsy; Harry Gregson, with What Happened to Jones.

Joseph M. Gaites has bought from Liebler and Company territorial rights to the number two production of The Vanderbilt Cup, and will reorganize the company for a road tour.

Lylene Radcliffe is playing the part of Dorothy Fraser in David Carson.

In the Bishop's Carriage will be the first traveling company to visit San Francisco since the earthquake. Arrangements have been made to play for a week at the new Colonial Theatre.

The regular season at the Madison Square Theatre, under the direction of Walter N. Laurence, will begin on Oct. 15, with Carlotta Nillson in a new play entitled The Three of Us.

Dwight Elmendorf will begin his New York season on Nov. 11 at Carnegie Hall. He has prepared a new lecture on Holland for this season.

The theatre at Nancy, France, was burned on Oct. 4, shortly before the arrival of an audience for a performance. There were no casualties. The damage amounts to $160,000.

The New York engagement of John Hudson's Wife at Weber's Theatre will end on Oct. 13. The play will then go on tour, and on Oct. 15 will open the new Shubert Theatre at Newark, N. J. The Measure, of a Man will follow John Hudson's Wife at Weber's.

Joseph M. Gaites is said to be planning a big extravaganza for next season in which to star Kittie Beck (Mrs. Gaites).

The season at the Irving Place Theatre will begin on Oct. 15, and the opening play will be Der Helfer, by Philippi.

The title of the new comic opera by Robert B. Smith and Raymond Hubbell has been changed from The Other Locket to Mamselle Sallie.

Madame Lydia M. Von Finkelstein Mountford, the lecturer, arrived in New York on Oct. 5 on the Campania.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Alexander Brown have purchased a home at Elmhurst, L. I., and will live there in the future.

The pump, whose absence caused the last postponement of the Astor Theatre opening, arrived last week and assumed its place in the back cellar, replacing the steam engine temporarily engaged for the part.

The matinees given by the American Academy of Dramatic Arts will begin in October, earlier than usual. One of the first productions will be a play by John D. Barry, formerly dramatic critic of Collier's, who has put one of his own novels in dramatic form.

E. A. Braden will take his Barabbas company to Malden, Mass., for a week of dress rehearsals before the play's premiere in Boston on Nov. 5.

Anna May Finn, formerly a member of The Gibson Girl and The County Chairman companies, was married at Wilmington, Del., on Oct. 4, to Herbert Hope, of Philadelphia.

Lillian Lawton, formerly a dancer with a Florodora company, was married at Baltimore, Md., on Oct. 3, to William F. Jacobi, of the firm of Jacobi and Jenkins, silversmiths.

William F. Connor and Lee Shubert sold last week to S. Hirschmann, for about $500,000, a tract of 536 lots at the easterly end of the Blackwell's Island Bridge.

Reflections from the Hearth, a melodrama in four acts, is now in rehearsal and will open at Stamford, Conn., Oct. 20.

Elsie de Wolfe arrived in New York on the Campania on Oct. 5. She has been abroad buying furnishings and decorations for the new Colony Club in Madison Avenue.

From the time-honored materials of melodrama, a woman selling herself to the least hateful of three ruffians to protect herself from the other two and in the end growing to love her husband, Mr. Moody has produced a drama that, from its interaction and clash of character and the poetry both of its conception and its lines, rises far above the mere theatric effectiveness of melodrama. The interest, in fact, lies in the inevitable clash of two opposite natures rather than in the power of the situations, which, though interesting enough in themselves, are used mainly to bring out the struggle within two souls. The play is essentially a study of two characters—the man, crude, uneducated, almost barbarous, yet possessing a rough, half-unconscious chivalry; and the woman, sensitive, delicate, her elemental nature obscured beneath centuries of refinement. It is the story of the softening of a man's nature, and the humbling of a woman's pride; and guiding all, forcing love to grow where hate seemed alone possible, is felt everywhere the hand of fate. It is this last element, so lacking in most American plays, that is the moving spirit of the story. Fate brings the man and woman together and binds them, as she herself unwillingly acknowledges, so that there can be no escape. Under its influence her New England conscience, the result of traditions and prejudices of generations of Puritan ancestors, crumbles into dust, and leaves her at last the elemental woman, who knows her lord and acknowledges him as freely as ever did the barbarian captive warrior who had won her from her native village. It is this concept of the basic principles of things, this brushing aside of the superficial, the merely clever, that causes the play to set a new standard for the American drama.

The theme of the play, as has been said before, is not new. It has been used before in Ingomar and many plays of lesser note, but its method of treatment and beauty of language causes it to stand by itself. It is to the credit of Mr. Moody that he has not had to go to Europe for his inspiration. Men are men and women are women in the new world as in the old, and fate is as irresistible in the Arizona desert or in a sleepy New England town as on the Roman Campagna or in the fjords of Norway. Those who tell us that there is no romance in the New World have neither read their Hawthorne nor wandered in the cañon of the Colorado. True romance does not exist in ruined castles or on fairy seas, but in the hearts of men and women. In fact the truest romance is only the name we give to those actions that to us are unexplainable. In other words, romance is but the consummation of the decrees of fate, or the carrying out of the will of God, according to whether we are pagan or Christian. It is this sort of romance that The Great Divide so well expresses. It is the work of a poet, Mr. Moody having already placed himself at the head of the young American poets, and the beauty of its lines is in perfect accord with the spirit of the drama. For a dramatist's first work, too, the play shows wonderful restraint, both in diction and condensation of action, the very first part of the opening act and a few moments in the last act being the only portion of the play where the interest is allowed to flag for an instant. There is only one other possible point of criticism—the improbability of the story. In the same manner one might criticise Hamlet for its supernatural feature. But taking the situations as they are given all else in The Great Divide follows naturally. And after all, this is the true criterion of the artistic truth of a play.

The first act is in Philip Jordan's ranch house in the Gila Desert, Arizona. Philip's wife is about to start on a journey to San Francisco and her husband is to accompany her to the train. Winthrop Newbury, a young Massachusetts physician, is called out to attend a man who has broken his leg, and Ruth Jordan, Philip's sister, who has come out from Massachusetts to help her brother in his work, is left alone in the house. Stephen Ghent, Dutch, and Pedro, three desperadoes, attack the ranch and capture Ruth. They are about to cast dice for her possession when she appeals to Ghent to save her, offering herself to him as his wife. Ghent accepts her offer and buys off one of the desperadoes with a necklace of gold nuggets and fatally shoots the other in a duel. Then he returns to claim the girl. He sees the horror she has for him and purposely lets her gain possession of his revolver. She tries to kill herself, but her nerve fails her. Ghent cowes her and she goes off with him to the nearest justice of the peace to be married, leaving a note for her brother telling him that she has eloped.

The second act is outside Ghent's cabin in the Catalina Mountains. Ghent has become wealthy because of a gold mine that he has discovered, but unknown to him his wife has supported herself by basket-making. Her pride and her sense of horror at being bought refuses to allow her to receive any favor at her husband's hands. Meanwhile, however, Ghent's nature is being softened by contact with his wife. In his rough way he tries to win her love. He showers her with presents, but she only considers them as deepening her degradation. He appeals to her and tells her of his love. She replies that for the first few days when he respected her she began to care for him, but that when he could restrain himself no longer and demanded his rights as a husband he had killed her budding love.

Meanwhile Philip and Winthrop appear, having seen her at the hotel, where she has gone to sell her baskets. Ruth introduces them to her husband and tries to make them think that all is right. Ghent finds out from them that his wife has been selling baskets. He confronts her and she acknowledges it, and drawing out the necklace with which he has bought her tells him that she had bought it back with the toil of her own hands. She tries to make him take it and allow her to go free, but he refuses, declaring that she is his. Her brother then appears and Ghent tells her to choose between them. She falls into her brother's arms and he leads her off.

The third act is in Mrs. Jordan's house, Milford Corners, Mass. A child has been born to Ruth, but she seems to loath it as a sign of her degradation. Mrs. Jordan and her daughter-in-law, Polly Jordan, unknown to Philip or Ruth, have sent for Ghent, hoping that Ruth will recover her spirits when she sees him. Ghent in reality had taken the next train to the East after his wife had left him, and has been in hiding at Milford Corners for six months. When Ruth is confronted with her husband she at first shows her old resentment, but finally as he tells her of his love and speaks of their child she begins to melt. He tells her that it is her Puritan ancestors who have forced upon her her horror for him, and then, just as he says goodby, she calls to him, and throwing the necklace about her neck in token of submission falls into his arms.

Margaret Anglin gave in the part of Ruth Jordan the best acting of her career. While her emotional power was as great as ever, she acted with a restraint and at times even a lightness which she has never before shown. Her effort to conceal her emotion in the presence of her brother was wonderfully acted, and the passage where she tells her husband of her growing love and then of its sudden death was given in a manner that brought tears. It was a beautiful passage in itself, but Mr. Moody must give half of the credit to the exquisite beauty of the way the actress rendered it. Yet perhaps most difficult of all was the way that underneath all the horror for the husband who had bought her one felt her love for the man, whom, as she says, she had "known all my life and even before." Henry Miller as Stephen Ghent played with a calmness and sense of restrained power that brought forth the best acting he has done for several years. From beneath the rough exterior of the man he succeeded admirably in bringing out his innate bigness of soul. Though the play is essentially a play of two characters, the other parts were well played, especially that of Polly Jordan, acted by Laura Hope Crews. Miss Crews gave an interesting performance of the good-hearted, rather light-headed young woman, whose marriage, as she says in the last act, though happy enough, "was not like Ruth's and Stephen's, made in Heaven." Charles Gotthold as Winthrop Newbury, the "unfinished product," whom Ruth could not love, was manly, and Charles Wyngate as Philip Jordan did what he had to do well. Mrs. Thomas Whiffen as Mrs. Jordan was charming as ever, and the other parts, especially that of Robert Cummings as Lon Anderson, were creditably filled. The settings, especially that of the second act, were most effective.

Henry Brodribb Irving, younger son of Sir Henry, made his first appeal to American audiences at the New Amsterdam Theatre last week in Stephen Phillips' blank verse tragedy of Paolo and Francesca. The young tragedian in face and figure closely resembles his illustrious father. His rather low brow, his expressive eyes, mobile, sensitive mouth, his slender figure, slightly stooping—though this may be apparent only in "the mounted back" of Malatesta—his slim hands, formed with a certain nervous strength, and above all his voice, ranging from harshness, almost hoarseness, to bell-like clearness—all suggest Sir Henry. The resemblance stops, however, with external appearances. The son evinces only a little of the father's dramatic strength and commanding personality; his acting is of the stage rather than of the individual soul. His art is of a different sort and, besides, he is younger than the Irving known to the present generation. It were unfair, therefore, to judge him in comparison with his father, or even to form a final opinion of him based on his work in this play.

Stephen Phillips' play makes of the historic lovers two weaklings impelled by fate to an inevitable tragedy. Malatesta he draws as "the hand and instrument" of this fate, as inevitably driven. Says blind Agatha, in the first act, "Unwillingly he comes a-wooing. She unwillingly is wooed. Yet shall they woo. His kiss was on her lips ere she was born." And so is the drama from the start shadowed, like a Greek tragedy, with an impending doom. Paolo, though foreseeing the outcome of his brother's trust, is too weak to run away, too weak to die, too weak to resist; and Francesca is too weak to refuse. They sin in their weakness, fearing while in each other's embrace. The contest in Paolo's soul is only tamely fought, as though but to satisfy an already half-dead conscience. There is nothing commanding in Paolo and but little that is appealing in Francesca.

Mr. Phillips begins his drama with the arrival of Francesca at Malatesta's home, under the care of Paolo. Malatesta's widowed cousin, Lucrezia, seizes upon the time while the young bride is being dressed for the wedding, to warn him against the outcome of the marriage. "Youth goes to youth," she says. With these words still in his ears, blind Agatha, his old nurse, tells of a vision of two lovers in an arbor of roses, and of the same two dead in each other's arms. Haunted by her prophesy, Malatesta is further led toward the fateful truth by Lucrezia, who sees in Agatha's words the indications of Paolo's faithlessness. Paolo attempts to evade the fate that is dragging him toward his brother's wife. He tries to escape by joining his soldiers, but his weakness drags him back to Rimini. At length he buys poison to end his life. To the drug-seller he confesses his guilt and is overheard by Malatesta, who has come to buy a potion by which he hopes to gain Francesca's love. Believing Paolo to have carried out his threat of death, Malatesta rides away to put down a rebellion in another city. But Paolo returns to Francesca and finds her reading in an arbor of roses. Together they read the romance of Launcelot and Guenevere, and Paolo, forgetting death, kisses her. Malatesta comes back from the fight and learns that his brother has been seen. At Lucrezia's suggestion he hides until he can find his brother and his wife together. Paolo and Francesca meet at night and Malatesta kills them.

There is something suggestive of Maeterlinck in this driving of fate. In the drawing of the characters, and in the rather crudely built symbolism of some of the scenes. Indeed, it would not be hard to find parallels to many of Phillips' ideas in the dramas of the Belgian poet. Paolo and Francesca does not measure to the highest standards either as a poem or a drama.

Mr. Irving's performance of the role of Malatesta is a gradual crescendo, starting at a low tone in his first speech and constantly growing in force to the final scene. But it appears as a studied effect; an early restraint to prepare for the abandon of the later tragedy. The opening speech, a welcome to his wedding, is delivered into space, in a monotonous, perfunctory style, in no way giving the auditors an impression of sincerity. To the monotony of his voice and almost entire freedom from inflection is kept up through the first act, except in the scene with blind Agatha. Then he speaks with double notes of tenderness and dread, though still with the same reserve. In the second act there is indicated a tragic strength in his scene with Lucrezia, yet the emphasis is not varied. In the next act his tones become fuller and more vigorous, and in the fourth act, in the scene with Lucrezia, his voice has a resonance that thrills. In the final scene, when he has the murdered lovers brought before him, his acting is magnificent. It is the one sublime scene in the play, and he plays it splendidly. Yet even here there is a certain stiffness in gesture that betokens the trained rather than the natural actor.

Mr. Irving's support is none too good, and scarcely one of the actors in his company shows in this play more than commonplace ability. Dorothea Baird plays Francesca with such a high vocal pitch that the girl, "dewy from the convent," seems to be shrieking her speeches. Her voice, shrill and penetrating, recites all the lines alike, scarcely differentiating between soliloquy and dialogue, except in the two last scenes with Paolo. Then she drops it to a lower register, far more agreeable and much better suited to the lines and the character. Her gestures are made with studied grace and are generally unreal. Her face is beautiful, but apparently lacks mobility, though in the final act there are indications of greater power of expression than she demonstrates in the earlier scenes of the play. In a word, her Francesca is a monotone pitched out of key. R. Harcourt Williams as Paolo is stagey and unreal, though he, too, indicates greater ability in the final scene. Maud Milton as Lucrezia might be accused of a little too much intensity, but the character, to be understood, must be emphasized, and this Miss Milton does. Ada Mellon plays blind Agatha with some skill, but her performance is not satisfying. Elaine Inescort as Nita, Francesca's maid, deserves a word of praise for acting naturally. The numerous other characters are performed with consistency if not with great ability.

The setting and stage management are beyond criticism. The two scenes showing halls in Malatesta's castle are particularly beautiful, while the inn garden and the arbor of roses, though both are rather highly colored, make pleasing pictures.

Liberty—Nurse Marjorie.

Comedy in four acts, by Israel Zangwill. Produced Oct. 8.

John Danbury, M.P.	H. B. Warner
Andrew Danbury	Reuben Fax
Captain Danbury	Ernest Mainwaring
The Duke of Donegal	A. G. Andrews
Peter O'Mulligan	Leslie Kenyon
Dr. Latchett	W. A. Hackett
Nicodemus	Hassard Short
The Duchess of Donegal	Essex Dane
Camilla Danbury	Kate Denin Wilson
Biddy O'Mulligan	Ada Dwyer
Nurse Marjorie	Eleanor Robson

Were Mr. Zangwill's latest play less well acted it might be dangerously near the abyss into which so many clever dramas have fallen of late. No inherent defects would incline it toward failure, but its British atmosphere, the presupposition that its auditors will understand without explanation the British types and British conditions illustrated might easily overweight the brilliancy of the dialogue and the whimsicality of the plot, and send the play toppling to join the London failure of The Lion and the Mouse. As it is, Nurse Marjorie will be almost as popular as Merely Mary Ann, because Eleanor Robson is as delightful a nurse as she was a slavey. Besides, New Yorkers understand—or think they do—conditions in Britain better than Londoners pretend to understand American affairs. The audience Wednesday night laughed at all references to the House of Lords and to other established jokes on English institutions, with a delightful confidence probably born of a familiarity with Punch, Tid Bits, and various other pink or green covered weeklies. Anyhow, Nurse Marjorie was well received upon her introduction, and the splendid acting of the cast is to be given the first credit.

As to the play itself, Mr. Zangwill has written a pleasant, satirical comedy, almost a farce, with a not altogether plausible story. He has indulged rather freely in puns and word-plays, but has conceived some very amusing situations and constructed some very clever dialogue. His characters are drawn with more imagination than reality, but they carry an air of sincerity to life that is as good as being real.

Nurse Marjorie is the daughter of a Duchess, and has donned the blue dress and apron out of a desire to be of some use in the world. Not having enough experience to nurse the poor, she secures employment at a private hospital for the rich, where she hides her identity. One of her first patients is John Danbury, M. P., a young "friend of the people," who has undergone an operation to be cured of a squint. When the play begins Mr. Danbury is impatiently waiting for the removal of the bandage over his eyes, so he may go back to his place in Parliament, not so much because "the people" need him as to escape the ministrations of Nurse Marjorie, whom he believes, with his blind eyes, to be old, fat and to have an incipient mustache. When the bandage is removed and he comes face to face with his attendant, his impatience vanishes, and his eyes at once become much worse. He declines to go to Parliament to vote on an important measure, and refuses to aid his father, a Newcastle shipbuilder, in settling a strike. Nurse Marjorie finally uses heroic measures to make him acknowledge his cure. She introduces her fostermother, Biddy O'Mulligan, proprietor of a fried fish emporium, as her real mother, and tells him that another nurse has been put on the case. It takes two acts to tell this much of the story.

The third act takes place in the kitchen of Mrs. O'Mulligan's fried fish shop in Whitechapel. Marjorie comes to visit her fostermother and Danbury, who has been persistently paying attentions to his former nurse, follows her to this place. He proposes marriage to Marjorie, who seems about to accept him, when Mrs. O'Mulligan interrupts them. Biddy, mistaking her cue, proceeds to disgust the young M. P. with recitals of her numerous family connections, until Danbury is glad to find an excuse to escape. Then Danbury's father, a scuff old chap, attempts to buy Marjorie off, even signing an agreement to double her income for life. The young man returns, too much in love to be driven away by even so much vulgarity as Biddy has described, and he renews his suit. Marjorie then tells him who she is—Lady Marjorie, daughter of the Duchess of Donegal. Danbury, who has seen in his alliance with the girl of the people a new hold upon his followers, refuses to marry the lady. She upbraids him for his love of popularity and his fear of making a bad appearance and leaves him.

In the fourth act Danbury has gone home to Newcastle and settled the strike, but not before he has been slightly wounded by a shot from a rioter. Marjorie, accompanied by her parents, comes to nurse him again. The Duchess makes it plain to Danbury's mother that she considers an alliance between John and Marjorie as entirely out of the question, and John still persists in his refusal to marry the lady whose name would always precede his in the newspapers. But Marjorie's father succeeds in convincing John that a marriage with his daughter, especially against her mother's wishes, would only strengthen his influence over the masses, and all ends happily, except for the Duchess and for one, Nicodemus, formerly buttons at the hospital, who has selected Marjorie as his own.

The role of Nurse Marjorie exactly suits Eleanor Robson's delightful art. It would be almost impossible to pick a flaw in her acting, certainly a thankless task, for the charm of her manner, her voice, her face, and her gestures absolutely dispels any impression except that of pleasure. All words of praise might be said of her work without going beyond the limitations of truth.

In H. B. Warner, who plays John Danbury, Miss Robson's managers have found an actor worthy to play opposite her. He is a son of Charles Warner, and this is his first appearance in America. Tall, graceful, well "set-up," possessed of an agreeable, well regulated voice, he makes an ideal juvenile, and these attributes, coupled with evident histrionic ability, make him a valuable acquisition to the American stage. He plays the role of the selfish, egotistic lover with dignity and effect, and invests the otherwise weak character with a sort of personal strength drawn from his own individuality. Reuben Fax supplies some excellent character acting in the role of Andrew Danbury, John's father, and Ada Dwyer plays Biddy O'Mulligan with a delightful spirit of humor. Kate Denin Wilson and Essex Dane are each good in the roles of Mrs. Danbury and the Duchess of Donegal, respectively. Ernest Mainwaring acts the part of Captain Danbury, John's elder brother, with considerable comedy effect, and A. G. Andrews as the fun-loving Irish Duke of Donegal does extremely well. Hassard Short as the Cockney buttons, Nicodemus, seems inclined to overdo his dialect and overact his part, but he never fails to make his points effective. Leslie Kenyon as Peter O'Mulligan, Biddy's Saxon husband to whom she has given her name, and W. A. Hackett as Dr. Latchett are equal in merit to the rest of the cast.

The play is excellently staged under the direction of Charles Cartwright, and Liebler and Company and Miss Robson are to be congratulated on such a good beginning to what promises to be a brilliant season.

Just as Jesse Lynch Williams' tale of "The Stolen Story" was and is yet the best short story of newspaper life, so does his play afford the best stage representation of that life, so far presented. Familiar with the city room of more than one great daily, and capable of understanding the many kinds of people with whom he comes in contact, Mr. Williams is peculiarly adapted to supply the theatre with at least the more superficial characteristics of a new field for dramatic writing. As a playwright, however, Mr. Williams has yet many things to learn. Excluding the newspaper "atmosphere" of his comedy there is little to be commended, either in the development of the plot or in the planning of the situations. The characters are real enough, but they do impossible things in improbable places—the hero snatches an important paper from the heroine in the crowded promenade of the Metropolitan Opera House; some rather violent lovemaking is done in a busy "city room" at 1 P. M.; a former diplomat is unable to "see through" as obvious a gang of grafters as ever graced melodrama, and a "star" reporter lets "a little fluffy, fragrant thing," as he calls her, interfere with the biggest story of the day. But Mr. Williams has erred through inexperience, and, since he seems of a docile disposition, will probably do far better the next time he tries. Very little fault will be found with the "atmosphere," though newspaper men will discover some things at which to cavil, and the lay public will find some scenes rather mystifying. On the whole, the comedy promises to have a vogue equal to that of The College Widow, and in spite of its impossible plot to deserve the best sort of success. It is one of the very few plays of this season without a wronged woman in it.

The story of the play contains only a few of the incidents and characters of the story in the book. Billy Wooda, a "star" reporter, is sent to find out the object of a house party given by General Cunningham at his home in the Berkshires to a gang of ill-reputed politicians. Billy has already fallen in love with the General's daughter and she has conceived an affection for him. In spite of her father's plan to have her marry Gilbert Townsend, a young philanthropic cousin of Billy. General Cunningham is a sincere reformer, and has called the gathering of politicians to secure their support in a scheme to provide water side parks in New York city. This Billy learns, and knowing the General's associates he suspects that there is some plot back of the ready acquiescence of Jake Shayne and his friends by which the General's plan will provide an abundant opportunity for graft. Harry Lascelles, a tabooed reporter, overhears enough conversation between Shayne and Nordheimer, another grafter, to understand that there is a bigger story back of the one told by the General. He plots with Miss Daros, the society reporter for Billy's paper, to prevent Billy's return to town and to thereby secure his discharge. Lascelles intends to make Billy dig up the story for him and then to sell it to Shayne and his friends. Miss Daros is in love with Billy and out of jealousy agrees to aid in the blackmailing scheme. Billy is made to miss his train and his paper is beaten on the story.

The second act takes place in the city room of Billy's paper, in the afternoon. Billy has been absent without leave for thirteen days, and orders for his discharge have been received from the editor-in-chief. General Cunningham's bill has passed the Legislature and has gone to the Governor for his signature. Billy arrives and tells of a trip to Havana on a tramp steamer and his immediate return when he remembered the story. He is given his discharge and leaves the office to go to a rival paper on the invitation of Lascelles, delivered to him by Miss Daros. The third act takes place in the promenade in the rear of the boxes at the Metropolitan Opera House during the progress of a charity concert. General Cunningham and his family are present, and so are Shayne and some of his henchmen. From an impossible Irish comedian Billy, now on the story for another paper, learns how the General's bill has been tampered with. After futile attempts to secure an interview with the General, he persuades Miss Cunningham to secure the original draft of the bill. The girl gets the document, but refuses to give it to the reporter, whom she has been led to suspect of unfaithfulness by Miss Daros. Billy takes it from her by force and eludes those who try to stop him.

The city room is the locale of the fourth act. It is now past midnight and the city editor is receiving reports from the men sent out on various stories. The political reporters have been unable to learn anything further about the Cunningham bill, and the city editor orders them to write what they can, when Billy appears. He rushes to his old desk, throws off his coat and begins to write. The city editor, about to send him out of the office, discovers that the discharged man is at work on the very story he wants. All his resourcefulness is brought into play in finding expedients to keep Billy from remembering that he is in the wrong office. Miss Daros uses every means in her power to attract his attention, but she is finally locked into the managing editor's room out of the way. Billy writes against time. They turn back the clock to increase his speed. Just as he finishes the last page Lescelles and Shayne, having got wind of what is happening, appear, but are kept away from Billy by the entire force. The last page is sent down and Billy wakes up in time to recognize General Cunningham and Frances and to realize what he has done. A gong clangs and the presses start, and as the curtain falls Billy and Frances come to an understanding.

Jameson Lee Finney makes a good stage reporter; a little too nervous, too inclined to posing, rather too self-conscious when reporting to be exactly a true representation of an everyday life newsgatherer. He will satisfy the preconceived standard of the lay public, but hardly suit the experienced newspaper man. In the last act, however, the sustained nervous tension shown while he was writing the story is an almost perfect piece of acting. Dorothy Tennant as Frances Cunningham pronounces very badly and does not often suggest the "little fluffy, fragrant thing" that Billy calls her. Miss Tennant is well suited to a certain line of characters, but she lacks, temperamentally, many of the attributes of the sort of girl Billy would have loved. Beverly Sitgreaves plays the adventuress role of Miss Daros with the fine skill she always shows in her work, but she fails to emphasize the only manifestations of kindness in the part and thereby keeps the character from receiving its just share of sympathy. Genevieve Reynolds is satisfactory in the role of Mrs. Metcalfe, General Cunningham's sister, and Jennie Lamont shows some reserve in the burlesque character of Mrs. Mackenzie.

Edwin Holt as Mr. Stone, the city editor, gives a most realistic portrayal of a resourceful news-

IN OTHER CITIES.

KANSAS CITY.

The event of the week, and one of the most important in the theatrical history of Kansas City, was the opening of the new Sam S. Shubert Theatre Oct. 1 by Eddie Foy and The Earl and the Girl. The theatre was packed to the doors with an audience composed of the elite of the town, who entered into the spirit of the occasion with an enthusiasm seldom seen in such a gathering. They came early and stayed late, for they insisted on encores to all the songs, which, of course, caused the performance to drag out much longer than usual, it being nearly midnight when the curtain fell. J. J. Shubert, who was present, was immensely pleased with the auspicious opening, while Walter Sanford, the local manager, was likewise enthusiastic over the successful beginning of the new house. The Love Route will be the second week's attraction, beginning 7. Henry Woodruff in Brown of Harvard 14-20.

The week of 1-7 being Priests of Pallas week in Kansas City, the city was full of visitors, and the theatres and other amusement places reaped the usual rich harvest. The programme of the week began with the Epperson Megaphone Minstrel Show in Convention Hall the evening of 1. The music was furnished by the Banda Rossa; thus a double attraction was offered in one. The show was fully up to standards of former years, which means about the best there is in amateur minstrelsy. The crowd was estimated by Manager Louis Shouse to be about 5,000. Tuesday night was the annual Priests of Pallas parade, an electrical pageant of rare beauty, while the annual ball in Convention Hall Wednesday evening, with the Banda Rossa furnishing the music, was the usual success. Thursday evening the minstrels performed again, while Friday evening the ball masque in the big hall drew an immense crowd. The week ended with a gigantic athletic carnival in Convention Hall.

The Girl and the Bandit opened a week's engagement at the Willis Wood 1 and played to big business throughout their stay. Vivia Gillette is featured in the co., which includes some very capable people. Miss Gillette handles the role of Violetta in a very satisfactory manner and won much applause for her several solos. George J. MacFarlane as the Count displays an excellent voice and was warmly received while William Tellery, Sam Mylle, Leoni Pam, and Carroll McComas also deserve mention. The production was prettily staged and costumed. Clay Clement in Sam Houston 4-7. The Wizard of Oz 11-13.

Secret Service Sam, a melodrama new to Kansas City, was the Gilliss attraction 1-7, playing to packed houses at each performance. Charles F. Aldrich has the title-role, and his acting won perfect storms of applause time after time. Queen of the White Slaves 7-13.

Mr. Smooth was the Woodward Stock co.'s offering at the Auditorium 1-7, playing to the usual big audiences. The cast was well selected and the play well staged. George Arvine did well in Willie Collier's old part, while Eva Lang, who had the role of Vera Vane, pleased immensely, as usual. Mary Horne, Mona Glendower, Henrietta Vaders, and Raymond C. Mannion also deserve praise for well played parts. Alice of Old Vincennes 7-13.

The Yankee Consul held the boards at the Grand 30-6 and drew large crowds at each performance. The show has been seen here before and the present co. numbers several of the same who appeared here at its former visit. Harry Short does very well in the title-role, while the principals include Charles Jackson, Isabel Carroll, Margaret Flavin, and Elaine Von Thiele, all of whom pleased. The piece was appropriately staged and costumed.

The Corn Carnival at Electric Park 30-6 attracted large crowds daily. Band concerts, balloon ascensions, vaudeville and other attractions served to amuse the many visitors.

Paulina is announced for concert in Convention Hall the evening of 10.

Asher Levy, treasurer of the new Shubert Theatre, comes from the Garrick Theatre at Chicago, where he served in a like capacity. Jack Quarles, his assistant, was formerly in the box-office of the Grand Theatre here.

D. KEEDY CAMPBELL.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Perhaps there were two reasons why The House of Mirth drew a good house at English's Sept. 27. Many were interested in Fay Davis, who made a good impression here several seasons ago in Lady Rose's Daughter and others in the dramatization of the widely read novel. In spite of the fact that it held the interest, the play was somewhat disappointing, bringing out in a more pronounced way than appears in the novel the deeper side of the characters. Fay Davis was highly praised by the local critics for her artistic and realistic portrayal of Lily Bart, and it was to her in a great measure that the success of the play was due. The work of Albert Bruening as Rosedale, Lumsden Hare as Gus Tremor, and Lorle Richards as Bertha Dorset was especially good. The rest of the co. pleased. The largest and most fashionable audience of the season that filled the theatre greeted Nat Goodwin on his appearance 29 in his farce-comedy success The Genius, seen here for the first time. Whatever the play, Goodwin always delights his many admirers here, and they are legion, and The Genius was no exception.

Sousa's Band followed, giving two concerts 29, and again he proved his great popularity among the music lovers of this city. The soloists were Herbert Clarke, cornetist, formerly of this city; Ada Chambers, soprano, and Jeanette Powers, violinist, all of whom were well received.

Lillian Russell in her new play, Barbara's Millions, opened the week at English's 1 to a good house. Radiant and beautiful as ever, in stunning gowns, Miss Russell surprised her admirers by the clever way in which she handled the part of Barbara. Charley's Aunt 2, 3. Lawrance D'Orsay in The Embassy Ball 5, 6. Ben Hur 8-13.

The Blue Moon, the first Shubert attraction to be seen in this city, was given a splendid presentation at Tomlinson Hall for three performances 28, 29. Despite the disadvantages of a hall not built for theatrical purposes, the specially constructed stage met all requirements and the production was a success in every way. James T. Powers, a favorite here, was genuinely funny as Private Taylor and made the big hit of the performance. Dick Temple, Ed M. Favor, and Templar Saxe all won favor in several songs. One of the most popular songs, "She Didn't Know, She Didn't Care," was sung by Clara Palmer, who made a dainty lady's maid and acted with spirit and dash. The costuming and staging were elaborate.

On Dangerous Ground thrilled and excited large audiences at the Park 27, 28. The specialties introduced to relieve the strain were enjoyed, especially the singing of Margaret Scott in the concert hall scene. The Eye Witness, quite as exciting and sensational, followed 1-3, opening to S. R. O. A Man's Broken Promise 4-6. Williams and Walker 8-10. Isle of Spice 11-17.

Hector Fuller, formerly dramatic editor of the "News," will be in the city soon as press representative of the Yvette Guilbert-Albert Chevalier co., which is billed to appear at English's 16.

Edward Daley, formerly press representative of the Grand, now holding the same position with Gentry's Shows, was married to Lena Lee Quinn, of Fitzgerald, Ga., at her home in that city 28.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Talbot, of the Park, will leave 10 for a trip around the world, to be gone ten months.

PEARL KIRKWOOD.

MONTREAL.

E. S. Willard opened at His Majesty's 1, playing Colonel Newcome for the first time in America. He met with a most enthusiastic reception, and on Tuesday night the S. R. O. sign was out. Considering the difficulty of his task, Michael Morton has done exceedingly well—to those who have not read the novel there is a slight incoherency in spots—but the story as a whole is well connected—and a great deal of the atmosphere has been retained—while the staging is splendid and most of the characters look as if they had stepped out of Thackeray's immortal work. It is safe to say that Willard's Colonel Newcome is one of the finest things that he has done. His own identity is completely sunk in the part, and one altogether loses sight of the actor. Next to Mr. Willard the Mrs. MacKenzie of Joan Blair is decidedly the hit of the play. Alice Lonnen makes an excellent Ethel, though her opportunities are limited. Gladys Granger gave a capital sketch of Rosy, and Jessica Arnold was good as the old nurse. Mason Rose Beaudet was a satisfactory Lady Kew, and Marie Linden a sweet but colorless Madame de Florac. A. S. Homewood was a delightful Fred Bayham. William Sauter a manly Clive. Ivan F. Simpson a capital Barnes. Clever character sketches were given by Charles Combe as Pendennis, Walter Edmonds as Farintosh and George Gaston as Bowker. The Middleman, David Garrick, The Man Who Was, and A Pair of Spectacles will be given later in the week. 8-13 William Gillette in Clarice.

The Girl from Broadway at the Academy is decidedly mediocre, both as regards book and music; the redeeming features are the specialties by Ernest and Arthur Otto and Harry Pentelle. Grace Edmund in the title-role gives evidence of a good deal of ability, and is very charming in her songs and dances. 8-13 Eugenie Blair in The Woman in the Case.

Ruled Off the Turf holds the boards at the Francais. George Mack plays the role of the young jockey, Jack Kline, in good style. Walter Horton, Lynda Earle, and Blanche Rice also do good work. 8-13 Secrets of the Police.

Sam Devere's co. at the Royal is about the best we have had this season. Andy Lewis, assisted by Maude Elliot, in his sketch, Won at the Wire, is the headliner of the olio. There are several other good turns, and the burlesque is well put on. 8-13 Miss New York, Jr.

Ray Elroy is the Mill at the Norvenston. Considering the limits of the stage a good performance is given. M. Ouset is satisfactory in the title-role. Mr. Lasalle is a clever Don Salust, and Mr. Prevost an amusing Don Cheesy. Paroitre in the bill next week, when some new faces will be seen.

Le Cadet de Gascogne held the boards at the National. It is an interesting romantic drama dealing with the life of Mary Stuart and her love affair with the unfortunate Chatelard, Madame Perlocort made an excellent impression as the unfortunate Queen of Scots, M. Schober did good work as Chatelard. J. P. Pilon scored as the warm-hearted Gascon Artaban, and Mlle. Veley made a sympathetic Stella. R. Harmant gave a capital comedy performance of Thomassin. 8-13 Sardou's Gismonda.

Rudolf Plamondon, the celebrated Canadian singer, gave a fine concert 1 in the Monument National, which was attended by a big audience.

W. A. TREMAYNE.

MILWAUKEE.

The Land of Nod opened at the Davidson Sept. 27 for a brief engagement to a large house. Knox Wilson as usual is very entertaining. The comic investure is fine and all the characters well played. The Illusion of Beatrice opened a four-night engagement 30 to good business. Maude Peaky is featured and does good work. The cast, which is a small one, is filled by capable people, and all the parts are well played. The comedy is staged in a good manner. Beginning 4, for three nights, Robert Lorraine in Man and Superman. Week commencing 7, William Faversham in The Squaw Man.

Before and After opened at the Shubert 27 for a short engagement to small house. The play is very amusing and deserves better patronage. Anna Eva Fay opened 30 for a week's engagement to large house. Miss Fay gives a very weird and mysterious performance and is being greeted by large houses. Among those in the co. are: Bowman Deaves, in a monologue; Estelle Bonner, female baritone; Phil Staats, pianist, and Jackson and Hoss, singers. Five nights, beginning Tuesday, 9, Mrs. Fiske in The New York Idea.

The rural comedy, York State Folks, opened 29 at the Alhambra to large houses; capacity at night. The packed house gave the play a warm reception. Week commencing 7, The Mayor of Tokio.

Young Buffalo, King of the Wild West, opened at the Bijou 30 to packed houses. The patrons who appreciate this style of play were well repaid for the visit, as it certainly gave them all the thrill and excitement necessary for enjoyment. The cast is a large one and the piece well staged. Week commencing 7, Old Isaacs from the Bowery.

The Kentucky Belles opened at the Star 30 to large houses. Among those in the co. are Young Buffalo in fancy shooting, Reid and Gilbert, Andy McLeod, and the Century Comedy Four. Week commencing 7, Yankee Doodle Girls.

The Crystal has an entire new bill this week. Ameta in dancing art being the headliner.

Great interest is being taken in the coming production of The New York Idea by Mrs. Fiske at the Shubert 9.

The Star Theatre will become the home of a new Thanhouser Stock co. next season. Negotiations have been concluded between Gimbel Brothers and himself by which Edwin Thanhouser becomes the lessee of the Star Theatre after May 1, when the present lease expires. Changes will be made before the house is reopened. Included in these is a new entrance to be cut on Sycamore Street and the rebuilding and deepening of the stage. High-class plays interpreted by a well balanced stock co. will be the feature of the new enterprise.

A. L. ROBINSON.

COLUMBUS.

Things, theatrically, look pretty good here this week, and since Monday saw the resuming of work on the remodeling of the new Keith Theatre, general joy was evident. Work of the character, the best of its kind, which Keith demands on his properties must necessarily consume quite a little time, but now that the labor has been taken up again in earnest much progress will be shown. Manager Prasser informs your correspondent that the house will open about the first week in January.

Jules Hurtig, of the firm of Hurtig and Seamons, accompanied by A. Saphira, owner of the Empire Theatre in Toledo, were here this week to make the first official inspection of the new Majestic, which they predict will be ready for an opening about Thanksgiving Day. Musical comedy and burlesque will be the bill of fare offered, and as one local wit put it, the location of the theatre and the policy would be High and Broad.

The Women's Music Club, the largest women's musical organization in the world, of which Ella May Smith is the efficient president, announces the first concert of the season for the evening of Oct. 12, with Madame Schumann-Heinke as the soloist.

Fay Courtney and Vaughan Glaser, of the Glaser Stock co., which played here the past Summer, were visitors in the city this week; they are to jointly star in Mr. Glaser's production of Prince Karl, and will play our Shubert Theatre some time in December.

Jimmie Powers in The Blue Moon was the attraction at the Shubert for three days week of Sept. 24, and drew capacity business. The production was one of the best ever seen here in point of real genuine fun and good music. F. Grace Reals and Aubrey Boucicault are to play here 4-6 in The Greater Love, also at the Shubert. Miss Reals is a Columbus girl, and a gigantic reception at the Hotel Hartman is planned for her.

Frederick Warde, the eminent tragedian, is here for a series of three lectures on Shakespeare, starting on 8.

How Hearts Are Broken and Ernest Hogan in Rufus Rastus are the two bills for the High Street Theatre for the week of 1st.

JOSEPH RUSSELL HAGUE.

NEWARK.

The College Widow made her second Newark appearance at the Newark Theatre 1-6 to big houses. The comedy is enacted in a spirited and entertaining manner. All the principals in the cast are happily placed, and all do much with their respective roles. May Irwin 8-13. Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch 15-20.

The Eight Bells gave merry performances 1-6 at Blaney's. The Byrne Brothers, Andrew, James, and T. J., appear in the roles with which they have always been identified, and are supported by a large co. Buster Brown 8-13.

The Way of the Transgressor was given at the Columbia 1-6. Victoria Walter, Harry C. Philbert, George O'Farrell, and Henry Knapp in the cast. The Vendetta 8-13.

Moritz Rosenthal, the pianist, will give a recital in the Krueger Auditorium Nov. 27.

The Bonzo of the Burn Band will give two concerts in the Krueger Auditorium 31, under the auspices of Sheffield Lodge and General Roberts Lodge, order of the Sons of St. George.

Leoncavallo and La Scala Orchestra at Krueger Auditorium 9.

The Shubert Theatre, the remodeled and beautiful Empire Theatre in Washington Street, will be opened some time during the week, beginning 8, with Messager's romantic opera, Veronique, as the initial attraction. The Shubert Brothers, lessees and directors, and Harry J. Hyams the resident manager. The Veronique co. will be kept in waiting for the opening.

GEORGE S. APPLEGATE.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The principal attraction of the week was given by the Baker co. at the theatre of the same name Sept. 24-30, with The Wilderness as the offering. The piece gave Lillian Lawrence a splendid opportunity to show her abilities in society drama. She made the most of the principal role. The business done was exceptionally good. Hoyt's A Texas Steer follows 1, with Gay Lord Quex underlined.

Georgia Minstrels gave a mediocre performance at the Heilig 24-26. The Royal Chef opens 1. Digby Bell in The Education of Mr. Pipp follows 4-6.

At the Empire 24-30 Maretta Smart, a young woman of considerable ability, gave a fair presentation of Lady Audley's Secret, with the title modernized into A Mad Love. A Millionaire Tramp opens 30, with Uncle Josh Perkins and The Holy City announced to follow.

A Cuban Spy was the timely and up-to-date title of a hair-raising melodrama at the Lyric 23-29. Escaped from Bondage follows 30.

The Allen Stock co. at the Star 24-30 gave up a favorable presentation of East Lynne. Monte Cristo opens this house 1.

The Baker and Lyric managements are having quite a controversy over the services of William Dills as leading character man. Both claim him by contract, and the actor is in a happy position of waiting for the highest bidder.

JOHN F. LOGAN.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Clansman was the attraction at the Tulane Theatre Sept. 30-6, and good attendance prevailed during the week. There was no unsatisfactory criticism of the play or the manner in which it was interpreted. Heir to the Hoorah 7-13.

The Baldwin-Melville Stock co. at the Elysium Theatre presented A Romance of Coon's Hollow to its usual satisfactory business. The co. continues its good work, and Richard Bubley and Lillian Rayer are still prominent as leads. Myrtle Vale, Miss T. Dwyer, Hugh Gibson, Gus Forbes, Thomas R. Findlay, Jessie E. Pringle, and H. P. Pollock made much of their respective roles. The Gambler's Daughter 7-13.

At the Crescent Theatre a fair co. presented Tom, Dick and Harry, advertised as a musical attraction. George Rickle, Harry Watson, and Edward Wrothe did the bulk of the comedy work, and did it well. The rest of the co. was of average character, and succeeded in being entertaining. Murray and Mack 7-13.

The Brown-Baker Stock co. at the Lyric Theatre presented Out of the Fold 1-7, a rural comedy-drama of some merit. Edith Evelyn and Theodore Gamble were the principals in the cast, and together with the balance of the co. gave a good performance. Men of Mystery 8-14.

The London Belles was the attraction at the Crescent Theatre 30-6. W. S. Campbell, Harry Stewart, James Mack did clever comedy work. The specialty features worthy of note were Weston Sisters, Wright, Brenners, Walston and Mildred, quartette; Harry Stewart. Rose Brydell is advertised as star of the co.

Barnum and Bailey's Circus is advertised for four performances here 6 and 7.

J. MARSHALL QUINTERO.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Lion and the Mouse played a very successful half week's engagement at the Metropolitan, opening Sept. 20. It was seen here last season and proved to be one of the record engagements, and this year it duplicated its former success. The co. was a very capable one, first honors being due Josephine Lovett, who gave a magnificent piece of dramatic work as Shirley Rossmore. At the end of the third act she was compelled to answer to several curtain calls. Paul Everton gave a strong, consistent portrayal of the role of John Burkett Ryder. Macey Harlam appeared to advantage as Jefferson Ryder. Balance of the cast were capable and included Ada Lovick, John S. Robertson, Elsa Payne, George Barr, Lyllian Buckingham, Nellie Robinson, and Dorothy Crane. The Umpire 4. Fay Templeton in Forty-five Minutes from Broadway 7.

The Bijou had one of Blaney's new efforts week of 20, in the shape of Old Isaacs of the Bowery. The presenting co. was ordinary, with one or two exceptions, notably J. A. Marcus, who appeared as Buck Wade; W. R. Ingram, Harry Fisher, and J. H. Lewis. The play was finely mounted. Fiske O'Hara in Mr. Blarney from Ireland week of 7.

The Prawleys at the Lyceum offered Moths week of 20 and won unstinted praise from the local press. Consuelo Bailey is heralded by the local writers as a positive genius. Brother Officers week of 7.

Ernest Fisher, of this city, is now in Chicago, engaging a co. which he will head at the new opera house at Deadwood, S. D. In addition to playing leads he will also manage the stage.

CHARLES M. LANE.

SPOKANE.

Spokane Interstate Fair, under the management of R. H. Cosgrove, opened 22 with a large attendance. The feature of the opening day was the Knakpos parade and carnival in the evening. It was a magnificent spectacle, that reminded one of the descriptions of fairyland: 15,000 were in attendance.

The Columbia opened its doors after a Summer vacation, with George M. Dreher as its new manager 23 and presented a vaudeville programme of considerable merit. Hastings and Wilson, comedians; the Fashion Plate Trio, Hildebrand and Vivian, Casey and Lesigh, and Annie Abbott were the principal features of the bill.

The Jessie Shirley co. presented A Texas Steer in a very satisfactory manner to crowded houses at the Auditorium 23-29.

The programme at the Washington consisted of vaudeville sketches and musical numbers that appeared to please the large crowd which attended each performance 22-29.

A number of little children endeavoring to sing prominent operas was on the boards of the Spokane most of the week 22-29. This co. is known as the Juvenile Bostonians and was organized in Seattle to help fill in dates on the Syndicate circuit. Checkers was presented 27 and would have been a success had the theatre and its equipment not been inadequate.

W. S. McCREA.

DETROIT.

Elsie Janis in The Vanderbilt Cup was the attraction at the Detroit Opera House Oct. 1-6, and all agreed that this dainty little lady is entitled to the exalted position of star and deserves every bit of praise that has been accredited to her. A double bill at this house for week following: first half Etienne Girardot in Charley's Aunt and last half The Gingerbread Man.

Our merry friend, Buster Brown, is holding high revelry at the Lyceum Theatre week 30-6, where he is making his annual visit to the delight of hundreds of little folks, not counting a generous sprinkling of grown ups. The week of Buster's engagement here holds the record for heavy business and the present one is not behind its predecessor. Percy Hilton in this season's Buster, and he carries out the Outcault idea with remarkable fidelity. Alf Grady was really the star as Tige. Another favorite will be seen here for week 7-13 in Rose Melville as Sis Hopkins.

One of the most lurid melodramas before the public is Lincoln J. Carter's While Paris Burns, on exhibition at the Whitney Theatre 30-6, where it is piddling to heavy business. A Man's Broken Promise is the startler that will occupy this stage for week of 7.

A. FRANCIS.

TORONTO.

The House of Mirth, at the Princess 1-6, met with anything but a cordial reception, despite the efforts of a competent co., headed by Fay Davis, to infuse some vitality into the bare skeleton of Mrs. Wharton's book. Clyde Fitch's dramatization is neither convincing, logical nor interesting, and with unusual unanimity the Toronto critics have damned the piece. Praise is due Miss Davis for her sincere and artistic characterization of Lily Bart, and others who do good work are Lumsden Hare as Augustus Tremor, Charles Bryant as Laurence Selden, and Isabelle Richards as Mrs. Dorset. The Gingerbread Man 8-10. Charley's Aunt 11-13.

The Tenderfoot's first visit to the Grand 1-6, and its second to the city, proved thoroughly satisfactory to the patrons of the house. Oscar L. Figman is again seen in his humorous portrayal of the harassed professor, and the other roles are in capable hands. The Girl from Broadway 8-13.

The Smart Set presented The Black Politician at the Majestic 1-6, to audiences who thoroughly enjoyed the whimsical doings and nearly excellent singing of these clever colored players. A Woman of Five 8-13.

J. ALEXANDER McNEIL.

OMAHA.

The Girl and the Bandit was the welcome offering at the Boyd Sept. 27-29, introducing Viola Gillette and a well balanced opera co. Business was good. Forty-five Minutes from Broadway week of 1, to be followed by The Land of Nod 7-10. Clay Clement 11-13. The Free Lance 14-16.

At the Krug At the World's Mercy was the thriller put on for 27-29. Some good specialties are introduced and a fairly good performance is the result. Peggy from Paris did a splendid Sunday business at two performances 30. Bedford's Hope is running week of 1 to capacity and will be followed by The Volunteer Organist 7, 8. Charles T. Aldrich 9, 10.

Turned Up is the bill at the Burwood week of 30, and the comedy is proving quite a success. Business is excellent. For week of 7, The Wife.

This is Ak-Sar-Ben week at Omaha, and our city is thronged with strangers. All the local theatres are benefitting by the crowds in the city.

J. R. RINGWALT.

PROVIDENCE.

The Providence Opera House was dark 1-3. For the rest of the week, opening 4, the attraction was The Prince Chap. Good advance sale. Peter F. Dailey in The Press Agent 8-13.

At the Empire 1-6 Secrets of the Police found favor with lovers of lurid melodrama, and large houses applauded the hero and hissed the villain. Among the players were Florence Hamilton, Albert McGovern, W. H. Dehlman, Henry Frey, and Edith Grey. Lottie Williams in My Tomboy Girl 8-13.

David Warfield in The Music Master is booked for the Providence Opera House 29-31.

The body of Mrs. Florence Rounis, known to the profession as Florence Corbin, who died in this city Sept. 29, was cremated Oct. 3 at Boston, in accordance with the last wishes of the deceased.

HOWARD C. RIPLEY.

JERSEY CITY.

Andrew Mack in Arrah Na Pogue packed the Academy of Music at every performance Oct. 1-3, and the good old play went fine. Mr. Mack has an excellent co., and the drama is put on in a lavish manner. Eight Bells 8-13. The Ninety and Nine 15-20.

Prof. Samri Baldwin and his daughter, "Shadow," have been doing a good business at the People's Palace 1-6. The performances pleased. In the olio were Prevoll, Jessie Lloyd, Henry and Young, R. G. Arnold, and Karnes.

Master Rosen, who plays the part of Buster Brown in that piece, was a guest at the Elks' rooms 30. He was delighted at the sights shown him and in turn surprised those members who were present by his convivial capacity.

Colonel John W. Holmes, formerly proprietor and manager of the Bijou Theatre, and his wife and son left here 3 for an extended tour to the Pacific Coast. They expect to return about the holidays.

Morris Cain, in advance of the Eight Bells co., has been doing clever work here. Michael Byrnes, the agent, will be made a member of Jersey City Lodge, No. 24, Theatrical Mechanical Association, 21.

Selene Johnson, of this city, who was with William Faversham last season, is now home rehearsing a part in the new comedy-drama, Wealth, which opens in Cincinnati in two weeks and then comes to New York.

WALTER C. SMITH.

LOS ANGELES.

Business Is Business, at the Belasco Sept. 24-30, was above anything that has been produced at this house this season. Mr. Barnum as Isadore Lechat was excellent. He is well supported by Marie Howe and Amelia Gardner. The Climbers 1-7.

The Ulrich Stock co. at the Grand seem to have struck another success in The Queen of the Highbinders 22-29. It is well staged and has enough thrills to satisfy the large audiences. Credit to due Lillian Hayward and Agnes Rankin for their good work. Anita, the Singing Girl, 30-7.

At the Burbank the patrons were treated to the great patriotic play Janice Meredith 24-30. They certainly are giving it a royal welcome. Miss Van Buren was a charming Janice. Mr. Mestayer as Colonel Rahl did a splendid piece of work. Miss Esmond as Tabitha Dolliver gets everything out of the part. Harry Glazier, Harry Duffield, John Burton, and Ernest Wilkes all help to make the play one of the Burbank successes.

At the Hotchkiss Pavilion the Cricket holds sway 24-30. The piece was well staged and all parts played satisfactorily, and the audiences well pleased with the offering. Arabian Nights 1-6.

DON W. CARLTON.

DENVER.

The Broadway was filled at every performance of Forty-five Minutes from Broadway. Fay Templeton made a distinct hit and her two "Mary" songs were received with enthusiasm. Owing to the illness of Victor Moore the part of Kid Burns was played by Maurice Elliot to the entire satisfaction of the audiences, though he was physically quite unsuited to the part. Julia Ralph was excellent as Mrs. Dean. The Free Lance 1-6. William Collier 8-13.

At the Tabor David Proctor repeated his big success of last season in A Message from Mars. Arizona 30-6. Peggy from Paris 7-13.

The Ameer was finely presented at the New Tivoli and received liberal patronage. The Singing Girl 1-7. The Bohemian Girl 8-11. Mascot 12-14.

Allen Curtis and his co. in the musical comedy A $10,000 Beauty will undoubtedly pack the Curtis Theatre the week of 30, as Mr. Curtis is a favorite here.

Benjamin Horning, of New York, has assumed the directorship of the Cleaves School of Acting.

MARY ALKIRE BELL.

LOUISVILLE.

Although seen here before, The Wizard of Oz drew crowded houses to Macauley's 1-3, and in Charley's Aunt, which occupied the house 4-6, with Etienne Girardot in the leading role, Louisville theatregoers again showed their appreciation of a successful play. In the co. supporting Mr. Girardot are Henry Warwick, Sol Aiken, Frank Hollins, Galway Herbert, Jacques Martin, John Norris, Nina Herbert, Pauline Neff, Helen Byrne, and Alice Martin. Business good throughout the week. Much interest is evidenced in the coming of Charles Hanford, who is underlined in Julius Caesar and Cymbeline.

A solid week of fun and music is promised the patrons of the New Masonic week of 1, during the engagement of Williams and Walker in their latest musical creation, Abyssinia. Hanlon's Pantasma comes 8.

Week of Sept. 30 Mittenthal Brothers presented at the Avenue Langdon McCormick's sensational melodrama, The House of Mystery. Judging from the large audiences, the piece and the co. are all they promised. The Phantom Detective will be the offering for week of 7.

CHARLES D. CLARKE.

ST. PAUL.

At the Metropolitan The College Widow had satisfactory business Sept. 27-30. The co. and principals were fully up to last year's standard. The Umpire, with Fred Mace in the title-role, came 1-3 and played to excellent business. The football scene in the last act was especially pleasing. The Lion and the Mouse 4-6. James O'Neill 7-10. Fay Templeton 11-13.

At the Grand Fiske O'Hara and a capable co. presented Mr. Blarney of Ireland for the week of 1. Mr. O'Hara has a pleasing voice and rendered several catchy songs. The bill has an excellent plot and is cleverly staged.

HARRY O. WILLIAMS.

SALT LAKE CITY.

This was a good week at the Salt Lake Theatre. Willie Collier opened the week Sept. 24, comfortably filling the house three nights. The play of On the Quiet is full of the good old jokes. Jane Corcoran in The Freedom of Suzanne, one night 27, which proved to be enough. Miss Corcoran's co. gave full satisfaction to whatever extent the play would permit, and was herself popular. Digby Bell, with an excellent co., gave us a good play 29, 30, in The Education of Mr. Pipp. Mr. Bell is always popular here and was greeted by large and well pleased audiences. The rest of the co. were good. Stewart Opera co. 1-6 in repertoire.

At the Grand the stock co. had a good business all the week, presenting Girl of the Streets first part of week and Shadows of a Sin the latter part. Adele Bradford, Clare Hatton, E. F. Conley, and David Rivers are worthy of mention.

The Lyric Stock co. presented A Millionaire's Wife week 22-28. Business fair to packed. Margaret Pitt, Ethel Roberts, William Balfour, Eugene Fraser, E. F. Taylor, and Alice Condon were popular. Next week, The Power of Truth. C. K. JOHNSON.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

May Irwin came to the Court Square Sept. 27 with her new farce, Mrs. Wilson, That's All, which in spite of the familiarity of the title had never been seen here before. The Hobart farce is funny, and its star is funnier. The Duel 25 proved the strongest dramatic attraction so far, and a full house enjoyed the fine work of Otis Skinner and his co. Walter Hitchcock, remembered for his appearance with the Hunter-Bradford Stock last Summer, was a convincing Dr. Morey, and Keith Wakeman and Charles Walcot were strong in their parts. Are You a Mason was presented indifferently 29, and Thomas Jefferson gave his familiar Rip Van Winkle 1. The funniest and the most artistic fun of all the fun-making devices was furnished by Dallas Welford and an excellent English co. in Mr. Hopkinson 2. Mr. Welford's name is not featured, but he is a comedy star of the first magnitude. Frank Daniels in Sergeant Brue 5. The Arrival of Kitty 6. Thalia Theatre co. in Yiddish drama 9. James K. Hackett in The Walls of Jericho 10. Chevalier and Guilbert 11. Just Out of College 12. Brewster's Millions 13. Red Feather 17.

The Nelson was open two nights, 3 and 4, for Peter F. Dailey in The Press Agent, and good sized audiences enjoyed the comedian and his musical melange. Kate Condon, Toby Lyons, Isabell Hall, and Bett Ohls were the ablest in the support of the star. Bostock's Arena occupies the house week 8.

The New Gilmore had the New York Stars 1-3, who gave a fairly good burlesque show, and The Man of Her Choice 4-6, which pleased melodrama patrons. EDWIN DWIGHT.

TOLEDO.

The Lyceum attraction for the week of Sept. 31-6 was S. Miller Kent as Raffles. Mr. Kent fills Mr. Bellew's shoes very nicely and suffers nothing in comparison to that celebrated actor. The Captain Bedford of Frank McCormick was exceptionally good. Susanne Lee made a sweet heroine. The settings were the same as carried by the original production.

At Burt's A Man's Broken Promise pleased good houses 28-30. Hal Reid's latest play, The Cow Puncher, was the bill 31-3. It was a story of the Western plains and was realistic to a remarkable degree. C. M. EDSON.

CLEVELAND.

Marie Dressler and Joe Weber in Twiddle Twaddle was the attraction at the Euclid Avenue Opera House 1-6. Rogers Brothers 6-13.

Brown of Harvard, with Henry Woodruff in the title-role, supported by a good co., was at the Colonial Theatre 1-6. Fantana 6-13.

The Rays in Down the Pike filled the Lyceum Theatre at every performance 1-6. Texas 8-13.

A Desperate Chance was the bill at the Cleveland Theatre 1-6. The Smart Set 8-13. WILLIAM CRASTON.

CONNECTICUT.

HARTFORD.—PARSONS' (H. C. Parsons, mgr.): Paula Edwardes Sept. 26, 27 in Princess Beggar was well enjoyed by three large audiences; it is magnificently costumed and staged. Brigadier Gerard was successfully produced 28 for the first time, scoring an instantaneous hit with a large audience. Kyrle Bellew in the title part portrayed the soldier hero with his usual strength and fine stage appearance. Ida Conquest's work was of high standard. The story is of great strength, of the period of 1814, when Napoleon, after his gallant Winter campaign, found himself at Fontainbleau with the scanty remnant of an army. Paris was occupied by the allies, and Talleyrand was forming a provisional government. There were papers that it was necessary that Napoleon should recover, and on this recovering hinges the story. Bellew being, of course, cast as the hero who does the work after many dangerous adventures. It affords opportunity for picturesque costumes and scenery and attractive stage settings. A peculiarity of the cast of twenty-four is that all are males save two. The performance was remarkably smooth for a first presentation. Bellew was called before the curtain and expressed great pleasure with the success, and stated how elated the author would be when he received the cablegram announcement. May Irwin and her co. amused two large audiences 29, presenting her new play by George V. Hobart, Mrs. Wilson, That's All. It is characteristic "Irwinian." The star holds the center, surrounded by pretty girls handsomely gowned and several comedians who serve as feeders for the witticism and satire which flows rapidly and easily all through the acts. Several new and catchy songs are introduced. His Honor the Mayor 1, with its snappiness, dash, good lookers, many taking dances, elaborate scenery, Aaron's English penies, and Harry Kelly, made a programme of merriment that was heartily applauded and laughed at incessantly by the very large audience. Rip Van Winkle was given a presentation by Thomas Jefferson to a small audience 2. The clever farce Mr. Hopkinson delighted three audiences 3, 4. The College Widow 6, followed appropriately by Just Out of College 9.——HARTFORD OPERA HOUSE (H. H. Jennings, mgr.): Veronique came 28, 29 and sustained the reputation that had preceded it. Cyril Scott and a large and able co. was enthusiastically greeted 1, 2 in The Prince Chap. A good sized audience welcomed Louis Mann and Clara Lipman 3, and enjoyed the fun and jargon in Julie Bonbon. Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl, 4-6. The Social Whirl 8-10.——ITEMS: At all three theatres the usual big audiences witnessed and enjoyed the usual Sunday evening exhibition of the latest moving pictures, augmented by the full theatre orchestras and popular ballads by well-known soloists. —F. W. Turner, of the "Daily Courant," has been elected historian of the Beefsteak Club.

A. DUMONT.

BRIDGEPORT.—SMITH'S (Edward C. Smith, prop.; A. E. Culver, bus.-mgr.): The Lion and the Mouse Sept. 27 pleased large house. The Ninety and Nine 28, 29, completely eclipsed its excellent business of last season. A small audience saw Mr. Hopkinson 1 and wondered at Mr. Welford's ability to carry the whole fun-burden on his shoulders. When Knighthood Was in Flower, exploiting Grace Merritt as Mary Tudor, did good business 2, 3, and proved quite satisfactory. Blanche Ring in Miss Dolly Dollars 4. The College Widow 5. The Hall Room Boys 6. The Millionaire's Revenge 8. J. K. Hackett in The Walls of Jericho 9. East Lynne 10. Joseph Wheelock, Jr., in Just Out of College 11. Me, Him and I 12, 13. A Message from Mars 16. Brigham's Millions 17. Nance O'Neil 18. Ruled Off the Course 19, 20. W. P. HOPKINS.

WATERBURY.—POLI'S (Harry Parsons, mgr.): The Ninety and Nine Sept. 27 pleased a fair sized audience. The Lion and the Mouse 28 pleased small audience. Paula Edwardes in The Princess Beggar 29; audience pleased. His Honor the Mayor 2 pleased. Blanche Ring in Miss Dolly Dollars 3; good audience; pleased. The Hall Room Boys 4. Mr. Hopkinson 5. James K. Hackett 8.——NEW MUSIC HALL: The new home of music here was dedicated on 2 by two concerts, in which appeared Victor Herbert and his orchestra; Madame Homer, contralto; Signor Campanari, baritone, and a festival chorus of one hundred and fifty voices, conducted by George E. Boyd; every seat was taken for both concerts; Victor Herbert pronounced the acoustics perfect.

NEW HAVEN.—HYPERION (J. R. Gilfillan, res. mgr.): His Honor the Mayor 3 pleased two large audiences. Veronique, with Louis Harrison and Louise Gunning, 4, 5 delighted good audiences. Mr. Hopkinson 5, matinee and night.——NEW HAVEN (S. G. Bunnell, mgr.; J. H. Wilkes, res. mgr.): The Hall Room Boys 1-3 amused large audiences. At Cripple Creek 4-6 thrilled large house.——BIJOU (S. Z. Poli, prop.; H. R. de Leon, res. mgr.): The stock co., supporting Lawrence B. McGill and Gertrude Shipman, produced Christopher, Jr., week 1 and delighted good houses all week.

LESLIE BINGHAM

Bijou Theatre

Ingenue. AT LIBERTY OCT. 20

Alan Dale, speaking of her part says it was "capitally done by Leslie Bingham."

"With the exception of a little hero-worshipping girl (Leslie Bingham) who giggled, nothing can be said for the women of the cast."—Evening Mail.

"A word might also be said of the exceptionally good rendering of two minor parts by ——— and Miss Leslie Bingham."—Post.

"A minor bit of character work is well given by Miss Leslie Bingham."—Sun.

"Miss Leslie Bingham, who plays a very young thing, autograph hunter, laughs to the most realistically and contagiously silly fashion."—Times.

In other parts the critics have said:

MORE.—"The ingenue role of Hattie Griffin finds a clever little exponent in the dainty person of Miss Leslie Bingham, a recent acquisition to the Proctor forces. Her first appearance yesterday was most pleasing. Graceful, animated and winning, she captivated all the person which fell to her with skill, and added to their impressiveness by the charm of her personality."—Albany Press-Knickerbocker.

"By advent of the new member of the company, Miss Leslie Bingham, is apparently prettiness and nice. She is giving a very sincere and intelligent presentation of a 16-year old hoyden, possessing romantic notions and a jocularity that is irrepressible. Miss Bingham's work is very natural and as first impressions are generally lasting, she is sure to make many friends in Albany."—Albany Argus.

DORA.—"The whole cast deserves commendation for the admirable manner in which they interpreted their parts. Special praise is due Miss Leslie Bingham as Mary Harrison. She has the voice and manner of an actress of high order. The best exhibition of acting in the whole play is given by her in the third act when she is pleading with the flint-hearted Farmer Allen for her child and the return of Dora to his side."—Portland (Me.) Evening Express.

NANCY & CO.—"Very attractive in her personality and very clever in her ingenue part, Miss Leslie Bingham succeeds in being the cynosure of all eyes each time she enters and is thought of even after the play is over. The character, Daisy Griffin, suits her admirably, giving her as it does good opportunities to speak and fly about in the manner that makes ingenues so attractive."—Albany Press-Knickerbocker.

THE PARISH PRIEST.—"Other characters were better cast, notably Miss Leslie Bingham, who has a capital brogue and much archness at Katherine Corrigan."—Cleveland Leader.

"The comedian and Miss Leslie Bingham as the visiting Irish beauty made a hit with the audience Monday night. They easily carry off the honors of the production with their clean cut comedy."—Cleveland Press.

VALLEY FORGE.—"The intrepid little heroine, Virginia Preston, is played by Miss Leslie Bingham. Both the Sunday and Monday night audiences have thoroughly approved of Miss Bingham and her interpretation of the role. She gives it both beauty and fire."—Minneapolis Tribune.

"Miss Bingham has a brilliant future before her. Her personal charms, vivacious beauty and really extraordinary magnetism are in themselves sufficient to win a place wherever she goes, but add to these qualities a versatility, an ability to play either heavy emotional or light comedy roles with equal credit and you have an actress who needs but the touch of experience and more mature work to rank her with the first."—Portland (Me.) Evening Express.

IN BROOKLYN THEATRES.

At the Montauk this week Blanche Walsh is seen in The Kreutzer Sonata. Mr. Hopkinson will follow week of 15.

Veronique, with Louise Gunning, Louis Harrison and excellent support, is the attraction for the week at the Shubert.

The College Widow, recently at the Montauk, is seen at Teller's Broadway Theatre this week. Frank Daniels in Sergeant Brue week of 15.

Cecil Spooner, for the second and last week, is at the Majestic in The Girl Raffles. This popular little Brooklyn actress and her strong company, many of whom are local favorites, have made an excellent impression. The final week started well Monday night.

At the Bijou this week Edna May Spooner, supported by the stock company, is seen in The Stubbornness of Geraldine. Jessie McAllister is the Western girl, Augustus Phillips appears as the Count and Harold Kennedy has a congenial role in the English nobleman. Edwin M. Curtis appears to advantage in a difficult character.

Darkest Russia is revived this week by the Corse Payton Stock company at the Lee Avenue Theatre. This excellent melodrama is produced in a praiseworthy manner, and all the favorites, including Etta Reed Payton, appear in the cast.

The Gypsy Girl, with Dolly Kemper as Daisy, is a very strong attraction at the Columbia this week.

The attraction this week at the Star is the Trans-Atlantic Burlesquers. Millie Leon, known as "the girl in blue," is a special feature. The olio is good and includes Howard Brothers, Friend and Downing, World's Comedy Four, Goforth and Doyle, Joe Emerson and Minnie Huggins.

The Star Show Girls entertain this week at the Imperial. There is a two-act comedy and a pleasing olio in the bill. Marie Croix, Charles Nichols, Baker and Lynn, James and Bert Mackey, La Salle Trio, James Dixon and Ada Corbett are the special features.

Manchester's Crackerjacks, recently seen at the Star, are providing good amusement at the Gayety this week.

VAUDEVILLE.

The Fays are the headliners at the Orpheum this week. The bill is excellent and includes John W. Ransone, in his impersonation of William Jennings Bryan; Rice and Prevost; That Quartette; Al Shean and Charles Warren; Leo Carillo; Bratz's dogs and Hacker-Lester Trio.

Paul Cinquevalli heads the bill at Hyde and Behman's this week. Other good features on the bill are Edna Aug, Trans-Atlantic Four, Joseph Carroll and Will J. Cook, Raymond Finlay and Lottie Burke, Emil Hock and company, Lavine Cimaron Trio and Hughes Musical Trio.

Keeney's bill is Hubert Wilke and company, Charles Guyer and Nellie O'Neil, Gus Edwardes's Messenger Boys, Don Carlos's animals, Joe Flynn, Mrs. Jules Levy and company, Bedini and company and Hallen and Hayes.

The Novelty offers Ned Wayburn's The Futurity Winner, Horsky Bergere, Gertrude Fisk, Charles and Henry, The Burtons, Emmons, Emmerson and Emmons, Cook and Stevens and Jack Marshall.

The Gotham bill is The Sunny South, Gus Williams, Madame Emmy, Ferguson and Mack, McDonald Sisters, Herald Square Four and the Edgertons.

Slafer and his band will inaugurate a season of Sunday night concerts at the Grand Opera House commencing Oct. 14.

The Blue Moon's Big Success—Brigadier Gerard—The Law and the Man—Notes.

(Special to The Mirror.)

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.

At the Garrick Theatre The Blue Moon, with James T. Powers in the leading comedy role, has scored the biggest kind of a hit. It deserves all the praise lavished upon it by the local critics, and is by all odds the brightest, biggest and best musical comedy that has been imported from London for many a moon. There is a pretty story, which binds the incidents together neatly and completely, and in costume and scenery it is simply gorgeous, with a splendid contempt for expense and a fine regard for good taste productive of results dazzlingly beautiful. The music, by Paul Rubens and Howard Talbot, is much above the average score, some of the numbers being quite in the Arthur Sullivan style. Frank Smithson, who staged the piece, deserves great credit for the invention of much novel and original business for the chorus, the evolutions possessing novelty and presenting a number of effective surprises. James T. Powers has a part which fits him neatly, and the extremely clever comedian causes roars of spontaneous and hearty laughter by his quaint, original and hearty work. His thoroughly legitimate and quiet methods point every comical quip to a nicety, and intelligence is never outraged to secure humorous effects. The singing principals, without an exception, are worthy of high praise. Templar Saxe, as Jack Armsby, has a splendid, vibrant voice, which he uses effectively, and knows how to act, which adds much value to his work. Dick Temple has a good part well projected in Bobbie Scott, while Ed M. Favor shines brightly as the flirtatious Major Callabone, and sings delightfully the light tenor numbers assigned to the role. Phil Riley plays a comedy role as an expatriated British Tommy Atkins, who has turned his hand to the making of Burmese idols, and gets all there is in the part well over the footlights. Ethel Jackson, the singing girl known as the Blue Moon, in Burmah, looks the beauty she is and displays some entrancingly melodious high notes; Clara Palmer is exceptionally clever and pleasing in the soubrette role of Millicent; and Arthur Donaldson is a splendid and dazzling figure as the Prince of Kharikar. La Petite Adelaide scored immensely in her toe dancing, which is a marvelous exhibition of technique and grace. In a word, the Shuberts' production of The Blue Moon quite reconciles everybody to the importing of English musical comedy.

At the Illinois Theatre, Kyrle Bellew, although supported by a splendid company, is, by the nature of his play, "the whole thing." When Bellew is off the stage interest flags, because the comedy, Brigadier Gerard, written by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, is not particularly intense in its theme, though cleverly constructed to exploit the personality of its Gascon hero. The local premiere of Doyle's new play at the beautiful Illinois Theatre attracted packed houses last week, and received the most flattering kind of critical comment from the local dramatic reviewers. There seems to be no question as to the success of the piece, although many of its incidents are shop worn, and several of its expedients lacking in reasonable consistency; but such is the power of Bellew's acting, and such the excellence of the supporting company, that faults in construction are overlooked, and a paean of praise is sung on all sides to Brigadier Gerard. There can be little doubt that Mr. Bellew will make a fine, masterful and finished portrait of Etienne Gerard when he mellows into the part. Already it is a picture of much distinction. The cast is very large, about two dozen being men and just two women, and the players are all excellently capable. Especially worthy of favorable notice are A. G. Paulton as Napoleon, Henry Harmon as Talleyrand, and Menefee Johnston as a bullying captain of hussars. Ida Conquest was charmingly sweet and made a pretty picture as the Countess, while Elsie Ferguson lifted the small part of the maid Agnes into favorable conspicuousness by artistic acting.

Wilton Lackaye and his adaptation of "Les Miserables," entitled The Law and the Man, now present at the Grand Opera House, have caused much comment, first as to the actor's delineation of the role of Jean Valjean, and secondly as to the adapter's work in making the play out of the monumental book by Victor Hugo. In this case the actor and adapter happen to be one, and Wilton Lackaye is that one. Whatever may be said as to the episodical nature of the play, it certainly holds the attention of the audience, and there can be no question but that the fine dramatic climaxes which are frequently in evidence call forth genuine applause and arouse active enthusiasm. Lackaye is strong and convincing in the prologue—there is a prologue followed by four acts—strong in the uncouth garb and make-up of the peasant just released from the galleys; convincing in voice, appearance and gesture, and thrilling in the climax when his soul is touched by the Christian kindness of the Bishop—this is one of the best moments in the play. It argues well for the success of The Law and the Man that it begins well and ends well. The prologue is fine and forceful, and the last scene of the fourth act—the death of Jean Valjean—is pathetic and artistically appealing. In between these two high points of excellence are scenes so varied, so picturesque and in several instances so novel that interest is never languid, and through it all the great soul struggle of Jean Valjean is pictured with restrained and finished artistry by Mr. Lackaye. The entire production is worthy and worth while. Mr. Lackaye is supported by a large and efficient company. The play is essentially a star piece, but good opportunities are given to Melbourne MacDowell as Javert, George Denham as Thenardier, William Lamp as Marius, Josephine Sherwood as Fantine in the prologue and as Cosette in the play, Louise Evarts as Eponine, Jeffreys Lewis as Madame Thernadier, and little Gretchen Hartman as the child Cosette, all of whom are worthy of special mention. Some of the local critics, in reviewing the first performance, had spoken of "turgid dialogue," and, referring to this, Mr. Lackaye said that evidently some persons who chose to find fault with the dialogue had never read Hugo's great book, for, as a matter of fact, the "turgid" dialogue had been lifted verbatim from "Les Miserables." In explaining why he ventured to appear as author, the actor said that he had tried to secure the services of a famous dramatist to make an adaptation for him, but his overtures had been declined on the ground that a success would simply be credited to Hugo, while a failure would be called disgraceful with such material as the great Hugo book. "Thus," Mr. Lackaye continued, "it was forced upon me to do the work if it was to be done at all, and perhaps furnish an illustration of the old proverb that 'Fools rush in where angels fear to tread.'" From the public reception granted The Law and the Man here it seems quite reasonable to suppose that Mr. Lackaye has created not only a fascinating play, but also a drama that will prove a financial success.

Miss Hobbs was given very neatly and prettily at the Chicago Opera House last week by the Chicago Opera House Dramatic company, which so far has been doing very creditable work in the plays presented since the season opened. William Bramwell showed himself forceful and curbed with a commendable spirit of restraint where so many would overact in the leading role of Wolff Kingsearl, while Katherine Grey in the title role was more than satisfactory, the little touches of genuine comedy which figured constantly in her rendition being "to the manner born." Her gradual growth from a "new woman" to a true woman was pictured prettily, and to those who had never seen the play the surprise which she gave them just before the fall of the final curtain, when she "cut the Gordian knot" by making a rush for the hesitating lover and deliberately kissing him was very satisfactory. The entire company was most competent in the various characters.

Chauncey Olcott has been playing to houses of good measure at McVicker's during the past week in Eileen Asthore, a rather pretty play, framed to idealize Irish character and introduce some pretty songs by Mr. Olcott himself, who sang as well as he acted, which in this case is quite sufficient praise. Eileen Asthore has one strongly redeeming feature in that it romanticises the Irish character without doing it as so many of this class of plays do—by presenting the pretty scenes against a background of "Down with the English!" The company is creditable, and the entertainment deserved the large houses it drew during the week.

The Man from Now, with Harry Bulger as the star comedian, made an emphatic hit with the Studebaker audiences and the local reviewers last week, which was the first of a three weeks' engagement here. Crowded houses were the rule, and the stalwart humor of Bulger, allied with the good singing support and the stunning beauty chorus, captured the clientele of the attractive Michigan Avenue theatre.

David Higgins packed the Great Northern last week with delighted crowds attracted by the play he wrote with B. G. Cook, called His Last Dollar. Higgins is, if anything, more popular than ever, and has assisting him this season W. Burt Cartwright as Tom Linson, Page Spencer as Clarence Lonsdale, Eleanor Montell as Eleanor Downs, the girl from Kentucky; Emma Salvatore as Viola Grayson, his false fiancée, and Thomas Reynolds as Kaufman, the broker.

C. D. Connolly, business-manager of The Man from Now, has been laid up at the Auditorium Hotel for the last ten days with an attack of incipient erysipelas. However, he is now convalescent, and hopes to be in harness soon.

George Cohan gave a "Yankee Doodle dinner"—whatever that is—at one of the popular restaurants last week, and among his guests was Roger Sullivan, the Chicago politician whom Bryan roasted.

The Sothern and Marlowe engagement at the Garrick Theatre will begin on Dec. 9. Their full repertoire will be given here during the four weeks.

David Warfield's appearance at the Garrick in this city will be his only appearance in the West. Arrangements are being made for excursions from surrounding cities and towns.

Mabel Van Valkenberg has signed for the juvenile lead in The Governor's Pardon, which opened last Saturday at Port Huron, Mich.

On Dangerous Ground, a new production at the Alhambra, played to fine business last week. Carol Arden, Llewella Smith, Cecilia Griffith, George Miller, and Frank Justice filled the leading roles, and twelve sets of scenery, with electrical effects and a realistic fire scene, were used to illustrate the narrative.

Dora Thorne, Rowland and Clifford's attraction, broke all records at the People's Theatre last week.

James O'Neill's production of John the Baptist, which has its premiere this week in St. Paul, Minn., was rehearsed and costumed here during the Summer.

Cecil de Mille, having stage-managed the Standard Opera company, a local organization, during the last few weeks, has started on tour with the singers as stage director. The company opened at Hammond, Ind., last Monday. The repertoire consists of The Bohemian Girl and Martha.

The first American appearance of Lena Ashwell, England's great emotional actress, is to be made at the Garrick Theatre on Monday evening, Oct. 15, when she will be seen in her latest London success, The Shulamite. Chicago is flattered in this event, since Miss Ashwell is to be brought half across the continent to the Garrick ahead of her New York opening.

It is announced that, owing to the great success of The Law and the Man, Wilton Lackaye will not play in The Jungle.

Ben Hur comes to the Auditorium for a run on Oct. 15.

The New Theatre opened in Steinway Hall tonight. The triple bill announced for the premiere—Sainara, by Ernest d'Hervilly; Engaged, by W. S. Gilbert, and Marse Covington, by George Ade—was given. Comment later. These plays will hold the stage for two weeks.

Last week's audiences at the Auditorium left no doubt about the popularity of those clever entertainers, McIntyre and Heath, or the wisdom of selecting The Ham Tree as the piece for the policemen's benefit, which will last another week at the big playhouse.

Walter Clarke Bellews has assumed direction of the stage at the Chicago Opera House. In Denver, week before last, Mr. Bellows sustained a broken collar bone and a sprained ankle in a severe accident. However, he arrived at the Chicago Opera House last Monday to direct his first rehearsal, being brought to the theatre in an ambulance and then propped up on pillows on the stage. From this position he was compelled to direct his rehearsals.

Frederick Paulding has been added to the Chicago Opera House Dramatic company, and made his first appearance yesterday as Lord Rintoul in The Little Minister.

Gay New York played a successful engagement at the Columbus Theatre last week. Harry Emerson was the clever impersonator of the perplexing Herrmann. Lillian Hoerlein, in the prima donna's role, sang a number of catchy songs. Among those especially competent in the cast were Magda Foy, Edward Brennan, Florence Clements, James Devine, Ollie Omega, and Edward Adams.

Recent engagements through W. T. Gaskell's agency include the following: Jack Sherman, Edward Sigman, Don Merrifield and Manning Trio, with Kiroy and Britton; A. B. Shay, Harry Murray, Helen McCabe, Isabel O'Rorke, with Geo. Samuels; Wilhelm Shaffer, Newsboy Quartette; Fistler Sisters, Ethel Young, Wallie Watts, Fred Hoadley, George Hunt, William Blake, Lester Howard and Mrs. Howard, Mr. and Mrs. Guy M. Dalley, J. E. Commerford, Stuart Holmes, Oswald Jackson, Frank Ritter, Ed Flynn, T. J. Byrd, H. S. Blain, Harry M. Botts, Joseph Gray, J. E. Caldwell and Arthur Davis, with Rowland and Clifford; Mr. and Mrs. George W. Lyons, Chas. Wilbur, John Stronach, Walter Robinson, W. J. Mack, Helen Gillingwater, J. J. Jennings, Mondane Phillips, Ben Cox and Reese Hastings, with Elmer Walters, Mattie Edwards, Katherine Florence, Gladys George and Edward De Noyer, with B. C. Whitney; Dorothy Vaugn and John Connors, with William McGowan; William Currie and Mrs. Currie, Walter Richardson, Maud Lee, Wood and Sherwood, Clyde Franklin and Ray Beall, with Davis and Conrad; Carrie Davey, Frances Gettings, Wm. Smith, Butler Manderville and Florence Renner, with Hanks and Frasse; Clarence Bellaire, with Belle of Japan; Carroll Elliott, with Homeseekers; Horace Herbert and Charles Suther, with For Her Sake; Edith Thomes, with Fast Mail; Helaine Hart and Harry Banjo, with Convict's Daughter; Verna May and E. C. Fitzgerald, with Poor Relation; Mr. and Mrs. Claire Nicholson and Thos. Boone, with Old Arkansaw; Margaret Bunket, with On the Bridge at Midnight; Fred Wilson, with Butte Stock; Harry Filson, Marie De Beau and Jack Bruce, with Nettie the Newsgirl; Harry Forrest and Florence Mills, with Political Boss; Leiah Hallock, with Peorin Stock; J. E. Pollard, with King Perkins; Mack Sisters, Mack and Maloy, Mamie Johnson and Maud Barrington, with Al Martin.

Clay Clement has made rapid improvement in Sam Houston since the formal opening in Minneapolis on Sept. 17, and the elemental greatness of the play is being skillfully and fully developed. The play is delighting all its audiences and the attendance is steadily increasing.

Manager Will Kilroy continues to get the most encouraging reports from his Cowboy Girl. The booking has been especially complimentary to the production, a great deal of city time being included. The Cowboy Girl will be the Christmas attraction at the American, New York. The salary list of the production is steadily increasing, and the general improvement indicates it is to have a conspicuous position among the novelties, that is, musical melodramas. Mr. Kilroy returns to New York this week.

Manager Mort Singer, of the La Salle, is now in New York arranging matters concerning the building of the new musical comedy theatre which is to be erected this season on Clark Street near Van Buren. It was first stated that this was to be a burlesque house, but the great success of the La Salle has perhaps changed the plan, and it is now certain that Chicago is to have a handsome theatre devoted to original productions of musical pieces.

Manager Harry Askin informs me that the great success of The Umpire—the La Salle piece put on the road by him—has resulted in the organization of a company to manage road productions of all La Salle Street Theatre successes. This company is incorporated under the laws of Illinois, with Mort Singer as president and Harry Askin as vice-president and general manager. The first show put out by this new organization will be The Time, the Place and the Girl, which opens Christmas Day at Joliet, Ill., with Arthur Deagon as the star.

Katherine Gray leaves the Chicago Opera House Stock at the end of this week. It is alleged that she is going to star in The Little Minister.

Manager Brown, of the Alhambra, says that the new plan of daily matinees at his theatre which was inaugurated this season, is giving good satisfaction. Commenting on the theatrical outlook for road shows, he said that judging from the reports from his own road attractions business promises are of the brightest.

The old Empire Theatre on West Madison Street just east of Halsted is to be rebuilt and given over to burlesque. There is no burlesque theatre on the West Side, and the opening is considered attractive.

Thomas Jefferson is to appear for one week at McVicker's Theatre in Rip Van Winkle, opening on Oct. 21.

Manager Will Black is in New York arranging for the production of Honor Bright and a new play by George Broadhurst. It is understood that these productions will be given their premiers in Chicago.

A new play by Sedley Brown, entitled A Navajo's Love, is to be done next week at the Bush. The play had a trial last season in stock at Omaha under another title and made a decided hit. Good things are expected of it here.

The Ellery Band audiences for the last fortnight have been voting their preferences on ballots provided by Colonel Ellery. As a measure of Chicago musical appreciation the sixteen numbers selected by Coliseum concert attendants is worthy of note. The list is as follows: Lucia, sextet; Carmen, selection; Chopin's Funeral March; Trovatore, selection; Tannhaeuser, overture; La Bohème, finale act two; I Pagliacci, selection; organ offertory, Batiste; William Tell, overture; Lohengrin, selection; Cavalleria Rusticana, selection; Liszt's Second Rhapsody; La Tosca, selection; Tschaikowsky's overture; 1812, Rigoletto, selection; L'Africaine, selection.

The old Orpheum Theatre on Washington Street, or what was left of it by the long-ago fire, is to be put in service as a scenic studio and scene dock by Manager David H. Hunt for the benefit of the Chicago Opera House Stock company productions.

Manager W. F. Mann has been very successful with his new Hal Reid play, The Cowpuncher, and his several other attractions so far this season.

A new $125,000 theatre is projected for Englewood, near the present location of the Avenue, or Sixty-third and Halsted.

A Navaho Love, a new Indian play by Sedley Brown, will be produced soon at the Bush Temple.

Arthur Pryor and band are to play a series of Sunday afternoon concerts in November at the Grand Opera House.

Harry J. Corbett will be in charge of the box office of the New Theatre. He has been assistant in the box office of the Auditorium. W. T. Kirk, formerly treasurer of the Joliet, at Joliet, will be assistant.

The bills this week: Garrick, James T. Powers in The Blue Moon; Grand, The Law and the Man; Studebaker, The Man from Now; Illinois, Brigadier Gerard; Colonial, George Washington, Jr.; Powers's, Strongheart; McVicker's, Eileen Asthore; Great Northern, His Last Dollar; Chicago Opera House Stock, The Little Minister; La Salle Stock, Time, Place and Girl; Auditorium, The Ham Tree; New Theatre Stock, triple bill, Sainara, Engaged, Marse Covington; Bush Temple Stock, Zaza; People's Stock, At Piney Ridge; Marlowe Stock, The Santa Fé Trail; Humboldt Stock, Doomed for Gold; Howard's Stock, The Sign of the Four; Academy, No Mother to Guide Her; Alhambra, Four Corners of the Earth; Bijou, A Fight for Love; Criterion, Chinatown Charlie; Columbus, We Are King; Pekin Stock, Twenty Minutes from State Street.

OTIS COLBURN.

WASHINGTON.

Mrs. Temple's Telegram—The Girl and the Governor—The Clansman—Notes.

(Special to The Mirror.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.

The Girl and the Governor, the new three-act comic opera, by S. M. Brenner, of Baltimore, and music by Julian Edwardes, was presented for the first time on any stage to-night at the National Theatre by the Jefferson De Angelis Opera company, under Frank McKee's management, scoring a popular and substantial success with a large audience. The cast:

Don Pascal de Mesquita	Jefferson De Angelis
Dick Kingsley	Richie Ling
Pedrillo	Andrew Bogart
Vascalla	Arthur Barry
Tremolo	Russell Lennon
Staccato	Roland Carter
Tacoma	Henry Vogel
Ruth Granville	Estelle Wentworth
Donna Isidora	Maude Leckley
Carita	Lillian Rhoades

The book is bright and entertaining, and there are twenty specially pleasing musical numbers. The scenes of the opera are laid in a Spanish settlement in South America in the sixteenth century, which lends splendid opportunities for costume and scenic display. The story deals with the adventures of Don Pascal de Mesquita, Governor of La Guayra, inimitably played by Jefferson De Angelis in that comedian's happiest vein. The supporting company is one of distinct ability, achieving many individual successes, with a chorus unusually large and talented. Next week, Francis Wilson in The Mountain Climber.

The Clansman is playing at the Columbia Theatre, opening to a crowded house, notwithstanding the appeal to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia of a committee representing the Interdenominational Preachers' Association and clergy of other sects, reinforced by prominent citizens, in a combined protest to prevent the performance. The commissioners' decision was to the effect that, as there was nothing immoral shown in the play they were without authority to interfere with the presentation. It was then carried to the Executive Mansion and laid before the President, who was to discourage said performance. Next week, Madame Butterfly, the tragic Japanese opera, will be given a first production by Henry W. Savage.

At the Belasco Theatre to-night a large house is in attendance, attracted by the standard cleverness of the comedy, Mrs. Temple's Telegram, a noted success last season. While we miss William Morris and applaud his success abroad, we have again a strong favorite in Harry Coner, with an added attraction in Sadie Martinot and a support that gives excellent evidence of artistic cleverness. A fine week is in view. Next week, Louis Mann and Clara Lipman in Julie Bon Bon.

That Sweely, Shipman and Company gives an excellent production of the Charles Major and Paul Kester play, When Knighthood Was in Flower, was strongly apparent to-night during the action of the play, which is most excellently mounted at the Majestic Theatre, where the part of Mary Tudor introduced a talented young actress, Anna Day, whose work throughout is worthy of all kinds of praise. The management has supplied a support above the average, headed by Alfred Swenson, a strong young actor, as Brandon. Next week, A Square Deal.

The Rocky Road to Dublin again introduces the accomplished singing comedian, Barney Gilmore, to a first-class audience at the Academy of Music, when a strong previous success is enlarged on the opening. An excellent company is seen in support. Next week, Custer's Last Fight.

Sunday night Lieutenant Amers and his British Hussar Band made a strong artistic hit with a crowded audience at the Columbia.

JOHN T. WARDE.

BOSTON.

Warfield in The Music Master—Mlle. Modiste—The Daughters of Men Moves.

(Special to The Mirror.)

BOSTON, Oct. 8.

There are not many changes of bill in town to-night, and the coming nights will be quiet ones at the desks of the dramatic editors about town to make up for the strenuous time they had a week ago. Of the newcomers Fritzi Scheff aroused the most interest and drew to the Colonial a house that packed the theatre just as she did when she first gave Mlle. Modiste there a year ago. There were very few changes in the cast to-night, and the piece went with a sparkle and dash that made it one of the most interesting comic opera productions that the local stage has seen in a long time. The star is always a favorite here, and the announcement is made that she will not be seen here again until after she has gone to London for a long engagement there. At any rate, that farewell racket would not have been necessary, since a fortnight's engagement here is altogether too short for Miss Scheff and her Bostonian friends.

The Daughters of Men made a move to-day but did not leave town. They were crowded out of New York by the run of The Hypocrites, and therefore at the last moment arrangements were made to have the company continue here with the Klein play and give special matinees, taking a lesson from the profits of William Gillette in Clarice a year ago. They went to the Park and had a surprisingly large audience to greet them this afternoon, the piece being given as effectively as ever. It will hold the stage for special matinees on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays, while the regular performances of The Lion and the Mouse are given just as usual. On the Wednesdays and Saturdays, when that play has its matinees, The Daughters of Men will go to such nearby cities as Lawrence, Malden, Portsmouth, Manchester and the like, returning in time for the matinee the next day. Meantime The Lion and the Mouse packs the house regularly.

David Warfield has made a tremendous success at the Majestic, just as everybody predicted he would, and the reception of The Music Master is just as enthusiastic as it was in New York. It is a delightful play delightfully given, and has started upon an engagement that promises to break records for the Majestic. It is a great personal success for Mr. Warfield, whose interpretation of the title-role goes far ahead of anything seen in Boston this season. His supporting players are all good, and there is the same smoothness and effectiveness of the production that is always noticeable in anything that Mr. Belasco gives upon the Boston stage.

Thomas E. Shea is the newcomer at the Globe this week and had an auspicious opening for his engagement, which is limited to a week this season. Richelieu was the play this afternoon and Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde to-night, both of which have been given here before by Mr. Shea and received as among his greatest successes. He will make no new productions here this season, but will revive The Bells, Othello, and Napoleon the Great in the course of the week. Mr. Shea's engagements are the standard drama events of the season at this house, where he was the first actor to appear in a Shakespearean production, and his large personal following will find a week altogether too short a time to satisfy them.

At the Castle Square they have a decided novelty in the Hall Caine line in the shape of The Manxman, which Wilson Barrett used to give, but which has not been seen here in years. The title-role is well presented by Howell Hensel, and the necessary contrast is afforded by the work of John Waldron in the part of the deceitful friend of the hero. The other leading members of the company are well placed in the cast, Ben Johnson, Shelley Hull, Mark Kent and Elfreda Lasche being especially successful. Miss Lasche proved herself of the greatest value last week when Miss Lawton was taken ill, and her work will be watched with the greatest of interest by her many friends who have enjoyed her work since she first came here to the Empire a year ago as a stranger.

John Craig is trying the novelty of a Robertsonian revival at the Bijou this week, and oldtimers are reveling in Caste. It has not had many revivals hereabouts in recent years, although once John Hare made a special personal success with his Eccles, consequently the outcome of the revival will be an interesting thing. A special feature of the week is the return of Mary Sanders to this company, her first appearance since it moved to the Bijou. Mary Young also is back after a week of vacation, and the excellent comedy organization appeared to better advantage than for a long time.

Ruled Off the Turf is the melodrama of the week at the Grand Opera House, and while Georgie Mack, as the jockey, is the star of the production he had to divide honors here with C. Blanche Rice, for she is a Boston girl and there were many of her friends present at the opening performance to give her an enthusiastic greeting.

Wedded, but No Wife, gave the full strength of the stock company at the Bowdoin Square a chance to show that the piece could be given just as effectively as by a combination devoted exclusively to it. In the chief character Charlotte Hunt has excellent work of an emotional nature and took the honors. Ralph Brown, who has already become a favorite with the patrons of this house, does excellent work in the dual role of the twin brothers. The support was good in every way.

The Old Homestead continues to draw to the Boston just as it did upon the occasions of the visits of Denman Thompson in the play, and the production as a whole is a remarkably effective one. It demonstrates the fact that the play is the thing, and that the homely pathos of New Hampshire life will long continue to prove effective. This is the last week of the engagement here, and it is very evident that it will finish just as it began.

Sam Bernard has made a great personal hit in The Rich Mr. Hoggenheimer at the Hollis, and the experiment of borrowing the hero of The Girl from Kay's for new complications must be set down as a marked success. Piggy has grown some twenty years older, but he is just as funny and his dialect is as mystifying as ever. The two great opportunities of the farce are in the coachman scene and in that as waiter, and here Mr. Bernard keeps everybody laughing, and nobody ever stops to think why or to care. Georgia Caine has never appeared to better advantage than now, and Edwin Nicander and Marion Garson also share the honors.

Henry W. Savage seems to have secured another Savage success at the Tremont in The Student King, for it has been heartily received during the past week, and the various members of the company have been made to feel decidedly at home here. The piece is musically a treat, and comes nearer to going back to the Robin Hood days of Mr. De Koven than anything that he has had shown here in a long time. The melodies are delightful, and the company does fine justice to them all. In the staging of the opera Mr. Savage has left nothing to be desired, and therefore there should be no reason for a lack of interest in the engagement until the coming of Mr. Savage's other production, Madame Butterfly, later in the month.

One of the most important features of the local stage in the near future will be the production of the Marie Corelli drama, Barabbas, at the Boston early in November.

Ben Teal has been making several trips to Boston during the past week and has been watching the performances of The Rich Mr. Hoggenheimer, which reflect his stage direction in their shapeness

Charles Miller, who was for so long the leading man at the Bowdoin Square and who recently made a week's trial in vaudeville at Keith's, has been added to the forces at the Castle Square, and will make his first appearance next week in A Temperance Town.

Gus Kammerlee is now the only member of the cast of The Old Homestead that plays the part in which he originally appeared on the occasion of the first production of the drama by Denman Thompson. He was an old-time member of the famous Boston Ideal Opera company, which was the parent of the late lamented Bostoniana.

George W. Sammis made his first appearance around town in two years last week. He comes here in advance of The Social Whirl.

The Castle Square will give its Shakespearean productions as strong educational features this year, as in previous seasons. The first work to be given will be Julius Cæsar, a revival made on account of the great demand from teachers hereabouts.

There was some talk of trying to get Guy Currier, of Lawrence, to run for Lieutenant-Governor with John B. Moran on the Democratic State ticket, so as to be of restraint as a conservative to offset the man who dares, but nothing came of it. Theatrical people would have been interested in his candidacy, for he married Marie Burress and took from the stage one of the most accomplished of all the leading women in the stock company at the old Museum.

Henry Arthur Jones is coming to Cambridge to lecture before the students of Harvard and Radcliffe. He will speak in Sanders' Theatre on the afternoon of Oct. 31, and his subject will be "The Corner-Stone of the Drama." He is also to deliver an address upon the same subject at Yale.

While Thomas Jefferson was playing Rip Van Winkle at the Boston, Max Bachmann, the sculptor, wanted to make a clay bust of him as he had done for his father years ago. He went to the dressing room and worked for some time upon the clay until it came time for the matinee to begin. Then he and his son went to the front of the house to see the play. In their absence from the dressing room a green hand came in and found a heap of clay there. Thinking it something worthless he threw it out into the refuse heap, and spoiled a good starter upon what would have been a good bust.

It would not be surprising to see an attempt made in the coming Legislature to have billboards taxed. There was a hearing on the project before the Legislative Committee on Taxation recently at the State House, and it was very evident that something might be looked for when the session convenes in January.

Advance agents who come to Boston will learn with regret that J. J. Merrigan, of the South Boston News, was defeated in his attempt to secure the Democratic nomination for Congressman in the South Boston district. He was third man at the caucuses.

The famous old organ which the city bought and which was once in Mechanics' Hall was sold practically as junk and brought only $400. Vandalism had practically ruined it.

Thais Lawton, the leading woman of the Castle Square, has just received her trunks, which she shipped from Los Angeles four months ago. They came by freight, and she expected that the trip would take only a fortnight.

Mrs. E. G. Sutherland, the dramatist, has been giving a house party at her Summer home at Siasconset, Nantucket. She was not there this year, but spent the vacation in New Hampshire, so this is her first experience of the year at Nantucket.

H. Price Webber has taken his Boston Comedy company to the Annapolis Valley, where a special car has been placed at his disposal by the Canadian Pacific.

One of the victims of the railroad accident near Troy, N. Y., was Mrs. George D. Stevens, of Winchester. She was formerly Elizabeth Desbon, of Malden, and two of her brothers were actors. One of them, Frank Desbon, was especially well known hereabouts in comic opera. Her death was a great shock to hosts of friends.

The auction sale of seats for the Symphony concerts continued all last week, and the premiums prevailed high despite the fact that the scale of prices had been raised this season. A large number of the purchases were made through the agents.

The Cercle Français at Harvard has selected a Molière work for its presentation this year, in the shape of Le Médicin Malgre Lui. It will be directed by M. Perrin, a French actor.

Marion Edythe Priest, a Cambridge society girl who has played at the Castle Square, was married last week to Arthur A. Cushman, of Buffalo.

Mr. Wagenhals, of Wagenhals and Kemper, made a flying trip to Boston last week to see The Student King and The Daughters of Men, with a view of securing one of them to follow Viola Allen at the Astor, so it was understood in theatrical circles here. JAY BENTON.

PHILADELPHIA.

Julie Bonbon—Anna Held in Her New Play—Sothern-Marlowe Open Oct. 15—Notes.

(Special to The Mirror.)

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8.

The new Lyric Theatre, after being closed for three nights last week on account of Arnold Daly disbanding his company, opened Oct. 4 with Louis Mann and Clara Lipman in their four-act play, Julie Bonbon, and made an emphatic hit, especially Louis Mann in an original creation that surprised his hosts of friends and admirers. Julie Bonbon is well worth seeing and the large patronage attests the popularity of the stars. The Sothern-Marlowe engagement opens here Oct. 15, with Jeanne D'Arc, first week; The Sunken Bell, second week; John the Baptist, for third and final week, with Saturdays the only matinee. This will prove the biggest engagement ever played by Sothern-Marlowe in this city, the public fully appreciating the way the management are treating them in way of prices, and accommodations in securing seats without the aid of ticket speculators.

Anna Held, with the Parisian Model, has made the hit and success of her life, this being the second and final week at the Chestnut Street Opera House, turning away people at every performance. It is a very brilliant and costly spectacle with an immense beauty chorus, constant change of dazzling costumes, pretty music, with everything to tickle the fancy of eye and ear. It pleases the ladies on account of the many latest Parisian gowns and the male contingent by the mass of pretty and shapely maidens. Charles Bigelow, Henri Leoni, and Truly Shattuck give excellent support. Joe Weber in Twiddle-Twaddle comes Oct. 15.

The Measure of a Man is meeting with genuine success and plaudits of the public and entire press, this being its second and final week at the Garrick Theatre to deservedly large patronage. The company is exceedingly strong and it is really a pleasure to record the saying of Augustus Thomas, "The Measure of a Man is the best play ever written by a woman." Kyrie Bellew in Brigadier Gerard follows Oct. 15.

Francis Wilson in The Mountain Climber is meeting with fair returns at the Broad Street Theatre, this being his second and last week. Henrietta Crosman in All of a Sudden, Peggy, comes Oct. 15 for a two weeks' stay.

The only new offering at our high-priced theatres this week is at the Chestnut Street Theatre, where Marie Cahill inaugurated a two weeks' engagement with her satire on divorce entitled Marrying Mary. The opening was large, splendidly rendered and the audience was highly entertained. Marie Cahill has a first-class company, with Wm. Courtleigh, Eugene Cowles, Roy Atwell, George Backus, Mark Smith, H. Guy Woodward, Annie Buckley, Virginia Staunton and a capable chorus. The College Widow arrives Oct. 22.

The Virginian, with Dustin Farnum and a well balanced organization, is at the Walnut Street Theatre for this and the coming week. It is a strong drama and Dustin Farnum's role a wonderful creation that deserves recognition and patronage. The Benefit Racket plays an important role here throughout the season. The Clansman follows Oct. 22.

Burton Holmes inaugurates his annual Philadelphia season Oct. 12 at the Academy of Music, with his illustrated lecture, "Cairo and the Egypt of To-day."

Grand Opera House: A large audience greeted George H. Primrose and his big troupe of minstrels to-night, the programme introducing George Gorman, Emile Subera, Eddie Horan, James Conner and a trained chorus with special soloists. "Cotton Blossom Coons," "The Evolution of the Negro," and Primrose's famous "Silver Shower" won deserved applause. It is a first-class, up-to-date entertainment. Nat M. Wills in A Lucky Dog comes Oct. 15; Eva Tanguay in A Good Fellow 22.

Florence Bindley, a great local favorite, was honored this evening with a crowded house at the Park Theatre. It being her initial performance of her new play, The Girl and the Gambler, a musical comedy under the direction of B. E. Forrester, and to judge from its reception it will prove a pleasing and successful venture. The engagement is for two weeks, followed by The Rollicking Girl, Oct. 22.

Allen Doone in Kerry Gow holds the week at the Girard Avenue Theatre. This play, made famous by Joseph Murphy, is still a good popular priced attraction. Vivian Prescott in A Child of the Regiment, Oct. 15. The Gambler from the West, 22.

This is the second engagement in this city this season of Joseph Santley in Billy the Kid, opening to-day at the National Theatre with two performances daily, with large patronage. It is well staged and properly presented. While Frisco Burns, Oct. 15.

A new melodrama by Hal Reid, The Cow Puncher, a story of the Wild West, is at Blaney's Arch Street Theatre and is highly appreciated by the steady and large clientele. Confessions of a Wife, Oct. 15.

People's Theatre: Home Folks, a good card this week in the uptown district. Queen of the Circus follows week of Oct. 15.

Hart's Kensington Theatre: When the World Sleeps, under direction of Mittenthal Bros., the sensational programme. Nettie, the Newsgirl, with Isabelle Lowe, comes Oct. 15.

Forepaugh's Theatre Stock company attract attention this week in presenting More to Be Pitied Than Scorned, which has been played by various traveling combinations for the past two years at many of our theatres, but never equaling the cast as given here this week. Bertha Creighton and Arthur Maitland deserve special notice for the leading roles. Houses crowded and everybody pleased. The Lady of Lyons will receive week of Oct. 15.

Davey and Speck's Stock company at the Standard Theatre appear for week in When London Sleeps, with its massive settings and usual careful presentation. Her Mad Marriage underlined for Oct. 15.

Dumont's Minstrels at the Eleventh Street Opera House appear in a new skit, The Mounted Cops, a take-off of our local guardians. An entire new first part with usual funny sketches form a very attractive and profitable offering.

Leoncavallo and La Scala Orchestra, two concerts at the Academy of Music; matinee Oct. 12, evening, Oct. 13.

New German Theatre: Splendid Stock Dramatic company in constant change of attraction to good patronage. S. FERNBERGER.

CINCINNATI.

(Special to The Mirror.)

CINCINNATI, Oct. 8.

Elsie Janis opened at the Grand to-night before a very large audience in The Vanderbilt Cup, which was an immediate success. It was Miss Janis' first appearance in Cincinnati since the time, nearly ten years ago, when she played children's parts with the old Pike Stock company. Otis Harlan and Henry V. Donnelly, who had not appeared here for years, were also cordially received. The Prince of Pilsen follows.

Babes in Toyland opened to fine audiences at the Walnut yesterday. Ignaccio Martinetti and a number of others who appeared here with the company at high prices are still in evidence, and the performances went with a snap and vim that was refreshing.

Trilby, with Herschel Mayall as Svengali and Ida Adair as the barefooted heroine, is attracting fine audiences to Robinson's. Mayall first showed us his Svengali seven or eight years ago, and it still remains one of the strongest roles in his repertoire.

Robert Edeson made many new admirers here last week with his splendid portrayal of Strongheart. While here he commenced active rehearsals of his next play, Elga, an adaptation of one of Hauptmann's pieces.

According to present arrangements the new Lyric Theatre will open on Nov. 12 with De Wolf Hopper in Happyland as the attraction. At the rate work has been progressing for the past few weeks there should be no doubt but that the house will be ready by that time.

The German Theatre company opened its season last night in Monna Vanna. The new leading woman, Margaret Elbig, scored an undoubted success in this difficult role. Other new members of the company are Rosi Harden, Clementine Pothry, Albert Gros, and Hans Wengefeldt.

One hundred of the leading citizens of this city tendered an elaborate banquet to Manager John H. Havlin at the new Havlin Hotel a few evenings ago, in recognition of his enterprise in building the new hotel which bears his name and which is universally regarded as one of the finest hostelries in the country. H. A. SUTTON.

BALTIMORE.

Viola Allen in Cymbeline—The Galloper—Leoncavallo's Concert—Notes.

(Special to The Mirror.)

BALTIMORE, Oct. 8.

The premiere of The Galloper, in which Raymond Hitchcock is starred, was successful enough at Ford's last season to warrant a return to the same popular house this week. Its reception this evening proved an indorsement of the past verdict in its favor. Mr. Hitchcock proved as entertaining as ever, and he was ably supported by Edgar S. Davenport, Roland C. Gordon, Philips Smalley, Herbert Cawthorne, Herbert Corthell, E. B. Filton, Alexander Kearney, Pauline Anthony, Georgie Lawrence, and Susie Forrester Cawthorne. The stage pictures were attractive and the entire atmosphere of the play delightful. Anna Held will follow in her new piece, The Parisian Model.

Viola Allen's appearance as Imogen in Cymbeline marks the first Shakespearean production here for some time. Miss Allen could well be counted upon for a clever interpretation of the role, and her performance justified the expectations of her friends. The support, headed by J. H. Gilmore, is excellent. May Irwin in Mrs. Wilson—That's All, will be seen next week at the Academy.

The offering at the Holliday Street is A Midnight Escape, being a four-act melodrama, the scene of which is laid in Russia. The environment is interesting and the play is well acted by the company. The Burglar's Daughter is the next attraction.

Otis B. Thayer comes to Blaney's in a new political drama entitled A Square Deal. The management has invited the rival candidates for Congress and their followers to attend on Thrusday evening. Lottie Williams will follow in My Tomboy Girl.

The Auditorium entertains its patrons with Charles Howard in the musical skit known as In New York Town. Mr. Howard, who is popularly known as "Little Ikey," captured his audience from the outset, and the production was a jolly one all through. Next week, The Black Crook.

Leoncavallo and the La Scala Orchestra will give a concert at the Lyric Thursday evening.

W. L. Ballauf, stage manager of the Holliday Street Theatre, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his connection with the house on Saturday last. He was the recipient of many congratulations and numerous substantial tokens of esteem. HAROLD BUTLEDGE.

ST. LOUIS.

(Special to The Mirror.)

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 8.

Before and After, with Leo Ditrichstein, the author, in the role of the doctor, was again seen at the Garrick Theatre last night by a large audience. Before and After is one of the few farces that improves on re-hearing, and many of the people in the house were witnessing the play for the third or fourth time. George Boniface, Jr., who has many friends here, is again playing the noisy patient. Laura Butler, a beautiful Florida girl, has succeeded Katherine Florence in the role of Mrs. Taylor, and is as good as an actress as she is pretty as a girl. Viola Kellogg met with instant favor in the character of Mrs. Page, and Eugene Redding plays the amorous Frenchman, Colonel Lorivette, in a way to make him popular with St. Louis audiences.

Before and After is preceded by the one-act comedy, Nocturno, by Percival Pollard and Leo Ditrichstein, that was seen here last season. Jean Newcombe plays Mrs. Hamilton; Viola Kellogg, Mrs. Potter; Leo Ditrichstein, the Intruder; Edmund Elton, his man, and George Boniface, Jr., the policeman.

Next week at the Garrick Ethel Fuller will appear in The Fires of St. John. This will be the first time the play has been seen in St. Louis, and a good deal of interest is felt as to Miss Fuller's appearance in this drama.

After much heralding, Man and Superman, with Robert Loraine as Tanner, came to the Olympic last night. It is probable that nearly every regular theatregoer in the city has read something about this Shaw play, and considerable curiosity has been expressed about the star and the play. To judge from a glimpse at last night's performance, Mr. Loraine is deserving of all the advance praise he has received, and the play is far more dramatic than most of the comedies of the incorrigible Irishman. Next week William Faversham in The Squaw Man will be the attraction.

Laurence D'Orsay came to the Century last evening in The Charity Ball. Mr. D'Orsay has a large number of friends here who enjoyed his work in The Earl of Pawtucket, and they were rather disappointed at the new play. The company is good and much of the dialogue is brilliant, but the piece does not give the star the opportunities he found in the other Thomas play. Little Johnny Jones will return to the Century next Sunday night with Bobby Barry in the principal role.

The Yankee Consul, with Harry Short in the role of Abijah Boone, is the current attraction at the Grand, where large audiences are generally the rule. There is a lot of fun in the piece and much good music, and Mr. Short is an able successor to Raymond Hitchcock in the character of the genial Yankee.

At Havlin's P. Aug. Anderson is appearing in Charles E. Blaney's "temperance drama," The Curse of Drink. Al W. Martin's Uncle Tom's Cabin is at the Imperial. The old play seems to still have a strong hold on the people, for the house was crowded last night.

The German season began last night at the Odeon, with the new comedy, Der Kilometerfresser (The Schorcher) as the opening play. The company includes Ferdinand Welb, Victoria Welb-Markham, Vilma von Hohenau, Louise Pellman, Martin Dudel, Hans Loebel, Fritz Beese, Jeanette Dupont, Fred Hein, Frida Kahle, Lina Dobers and Hans Albrecht. A new departure at the German Theatre is the earlier rise of the curtain. The overture will be played at exactly 7.30 o'clock and the curtain will rise immediately after it is finished.

Dwight Elmendorf will give his second lecture at the Odeon on Oct. 12. His subject will be "The Rhine." HAROLD WHITMAN.

PITTSBURGH.

The Man on the Box—'Way Down East—The Millionaire Detective—Other News.

(Special to The Mirror.)

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 8.

Henry E. Dixey in The Man on the Box is the attraction at the Belasco this week, and the attendance last night was an evidence of the favor felt for this pleasant comedy and for the humor of the star. Leo Ditrichstein's farce, Before and After, is next week's bill.

'Way Down East drew a capacity audience at the Alvin to-night. The company is excellent and the stage settings up to the standard. Phœbe Davies is again seen as Anna Moore, and Frank Bell plays the town constable in his original mien which has never been excelled. It is booked for two weeks, and will be followed by The Yankee Consul.

The crowds at the Bijou to-day found plenty of excitement in The Millionaire Detective with Howard Hall in the title role and supported by a good company. Next week, Ernest Hogan in Rufus Rastus.

Joe Weber and a large company, including Marie Dressler, drew a large audience to the Nixon to-night and presented the musical farce, Twiddle-Twaddle, and a laughable skit, The Jays. Elsie Janis in The Vanderbilt Cup comes next week.

S. R. O. was in evidence uptown to-night at Blaney's Empire, where A Race for Life is the bill. The play was well acted and adequately staged. The Hall Room Boys for next week.

The Vanity Fair Burlesquers drew the usual large audiences to the Gayety to-day and presented a spectacular piece, The Birth of the United States; or, The Declaration of Independence. Ben Ali's troupe of Arabian acrobats is the feature of the olio acts. The Behman Show follows.

Harry Williams' Imperials is the "Show" at his Academy this week, and the little house was filled to-day as usual.

Burton Holmes will give the first of his series of travelogues, Cairo, at Carnegie Hall on Thursday night.

The New York Symphony Orchestra, Walter Damrosch, conductor, is the feature at the Exposition in the Music Hall this week.

Mayor George W. Guthrie prohibited the benefit musical entertainment for the widow and daughter of the late bandmaster, P. S. Gilmore, which was to have been given at the Nixon last night (Sunday). ALBERT S. L. HEWES.

NEW ZEALAND NOTES.

Mrs. Brune's Tour Begins—The Macmahons' Season—Plans for Next Year.

(Special Correspondence of The Mirror.)

WELLINGTON, Sept. 10.

J. C. Williamson's Dramatic company, which is headed by the clever American actress, Mrs. Tittell Brune, commenced a New Zealand tour at the Wellington Opera House on Sept. 5 with Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall. The house was packed to the doors with a most enthusiastic audience, and the play went with a vim characteristic of this clever company from start to finish.

The alterations of the Canterbury Hall to His Majesty's Theatre have cost £4,000.

The Macmahon Dramatic season, which commenced on Sept. 8 at His Majesty's, Auckland, will cover a period of four weeks there, after which the company will play at principal towns from Taranaki to Wellington, opening at the Opera House early in November. They will play their usual and always looked for West Coast season at Greymouth, Hokitika, Reefton, and Westport at Christmas time.

Leslie Harris, the celebrated English monologue entertainer, at present touring New Zealand with success, is negotiating for a tour of America, which he is in great hopes of shortly undertaking. He is a clever entertainer, and has got the "goods to deliver."

Messrs. Macmahon commenced their fourth consecutive annual tour of New Zealand on Sept. 8 at Her Majesty's Theatre, Auckland, with their new company recently reorganised and reinforced in Australia. The opening production, upon which much time, care and cost have been expended, will be the new nautical English drama, Our Guardian Angel, the sole New Zealand rights of which they have purchased outright.

Wirth's Circus and Menagerie commences a tour of New Zealand about the end of the present year.

The days of the picture show are, I am afraid, numbered in New Zealand. The colony has during the past few months been simply overrun with this class of entertainment, and I often wonder how some of the various concerns get from one town to another.

It has been decided by J. C. Williamson that Julius Knight and a specially selected company will visit New Zealand next year. Bert Royle has booked the following tour: Wellington, May 29 to June 18; Wanganui, June 19 and 20; Stratford, June 21; New Plymouth, June 22; Auckland, June 24 to July 13; Gisborne, July 15 to July 17; Napier, July 18 and 19; Hastings, July 20; Dannevirke, July 22; Palmerston North, July 23 and 24; Masterton, July 25 and 26; Christchurch, July 29 to Aug. 10; Timaru, Aug. 12 and 13; Dunedin, Aug. 14 to Aug. 28; Invercargill, Aug. 29 and 31.

The Willoughby-Ward-Geach Comedy company commences a tour of New Zealand early next month with The Man from Mexico.

Anderson's Dramatic company commenced a season at Christchurch on Sept. 8 with The Worst Woman in London. The recent Wellington season was a successful one.

The Canterbury Hall Company made a small profit of £236 on last year's operations, despite the fact that it was closed for two months for alterations.

Bert Royle has during the past few days been busy at work booking tours of New Zealand for J. C. Williamson as far ahead as 1909. ANDREW SHARP.

YIDDISH ACTORS STRIKE.

The entire lower East Side was thrown into a state of frenzied excitement on Wednesday evening last, and the neighborhood of the Irving Music Hall on Broome Street was the scene of a small riot that called for prompt action and a liberal use of their nightsticks by fifty policemen. The cause of the trouble was a row between the Jewish Variety Actors' Union and the managers of the theatre, Herman and Jacob Baum. It appears that the managers decided that the services of Ida Durkin, who is a strictly union actress, would be dispensed with, and she promptly reported the matter to the Jewish Actors' Union, which is affiliated with the vestmakers, the pants pressers, the buttonhole workers and other organizations. As soon as the news of the affront to Miss Durkin became known the members of the various unions rallied to her support, and a yelling mob, most of the faces being hidden behind great bunches of whiskers, stormed the doors of the theatre and manifested the greatest displeasure (in choice Yiddish) at the action of the managers. To make matters more embarrassing for the directors of the amusement enterprise, the other actors, who are unionists, went on strike at 7 o'clock, when they should have been starting to work. In vain the managers explained that they had no grievance against the union, and reiterated that the only reason for dismissing Miss Durkin was that they had enough union labor on hand. The strikers walked out, and above the Yiddish din the word "boycott" was yelled and screamed from 10,000 throats.

The management tried to meet the situation by engaging a lot of actors from an organization called the Industrial Workers of the World, but this did not settle matters by any means. The curtain was rung up, but the performance had no sooner started than there was a terrible din from the building next door to the theatre, where a number of union musicians played "Waiting at the Church" over and over again, with many discords, showing thereby that the unions were not to be trifled with and making such a racket that the industrial actors could not hear the sound of their own voices. The mob climbed fire escapes and invaded the windows of all the neighboring tenements and joined in the awful chorus with a will.

Captain Murtha arrived on the scene with his fifty trusty bluecoats and soon dispersed the band and put a stop to the distribution of circulars denouncing the "scab actors." The unionists, undismayed, ascended to the roofs of the houses and threw handfuls of the circulars into the street. The "cops" got busy climbing stairs and soon there was a merry chase over the rooftops, in which the ingenious bill distributors got the worst of it. While this was going on the "scab actors" in the theatre were struggling to show the humor of a sketch called The Dun Collector, and were having a hard time of it. The audience, being friendly to the management, was well-behaved, but they did not enjoy the performance very much. At the finish the actors and the audience had to be escorted to their homes by the police.

The fun began in the afternoon, when the strikers and hundreds of sympathizers organized a parade that gave the teeming Yiddish population a rare treat. The parade was headed by twelve union actresses in costume and make-up, and they were followed by union ushers, union ticket sellers, union scene shifters, union stage hands, union speculators and others who earn a living in the Yiddish temples of amusement. They were followed by unionists of other trades who happened to be out of work, and the parade was a very imposing demonstration of what unionism can accomplish when it sets its teeth hard. After the parade a meeting was held, at which $300 was subscribed for the benefit of the strikers.

The trouble continued all day Thursday and several fights occurred. The unionists employed female pickets, who tried to enforce the boycott against the house. Two of the women were arrested for creating a disturbance and were fined $3 each. Another "lady picket" had her nose smashed by an unknown assailant, and her screams caused a crowd of 1,500 to gather, which was dispersed by the police.

The strike was settled on Thursday evening, and the members of the various unions rejoiced exceedingly. All the union actors were taken back, even Miss Durkin, and a new agreement was entered into between the managers and the actors. If it becomes necessary to dispense with the services of a union actor hereafter, he or she must get two weeks' notice, and a union player must be employed to replace the one discharged.

NEW PLAY FOR THE BELASCO.

David Belasco announced yesterday that the play to follow The Girl of the Golden West at the Belasco will be a drama of Western life entitled The Rose of the Rancho. It is a story of life in California at the time of the invasion from the United States, and is by David Belasco and Richard Walton Tully. It is to be a "no star" play, but is to have an unusually strong company, which will include Charles Richman, H. Ravell, Frank Losee, Mrs. Grace Gaylor Clark, Frances Starr, Maria Davis, Jane Towl, John W. Cope, J. H. Beurimo, F. H. Westerton, Gilmore Scott, W. Elliott, Wayne Orey, Nobert Sill, Girgilio Arriaza, and Martha Melean. The play has been produced in the West under the title of Juanita, but has been largely rewritten. It will be presented first at the Majestic Theatre, Boston, early in November, and then brought to the Belasco Theatre.

OFFER FOR THE LONDON LYCEUM.

Colonel Mapleson has made a definite offer of $600,000 for the Lyceum Theatre, London, intending to devote it to the production of grand opera. The acceptance of the offer depends on the Court of Chancery owing to the objection of some of the shareholders, but as the first debenture mortgagees, who are actually in possession, are favorably inclined it is assumed that the offer will be accepted. Negotiations are already going on with the directors of the State Theatre in Paris for Summer performances. The house, which has been unoccupied since it failed as a music hall, will, if the offer is accepted, be reconstructed and restored to the prominence it held when it was under the control of the late Sir Henry Irving.

HACKETT ENTERTAINS IRVING.

James K. Hackett entertained H. B. Irving at a supper at the Players' Club last Saturday night after the theatre. Among those invited were Samuel L. Clemens, Melville E. Stone, John Drew, Evert J. Wendell, Paul Morton, Augustus Thomas, Howard Chandler Christy, Edmund Clarence Stedman, Brander Matthews, H. H. Kohlsaat, Henry W. Savage, George Ade, and Daniel Frohman. Mr. Hackett and Mr. Irving are friends of long standing.

EZRA KENDALL'S SEASON BEGINS.

Ezra Kendall began his season in his new comedy, Bwell Elegant Jones, by Herbert Hall Winslow, at the Grand Opera House, Wilmington, Del., on Oct. 4. The cast includes Harry Driscoll, Charles Mylott, Harmon MacGregor, Douglass Joss, William McKee, George Neville, W. D. Stone, Joseph Wright, Genevieve Blinn, Grace Gibbons, Caroline Eckert, Mal Wells and Margaret Shaw.

OLD SHAKESPEARE SOLD.

A copy of the third edition of Shakespeare's "Passionate Pilgrim," of which the only other copy extant is in the Bodleian Library, at London, has just been sold at private sale in England to an American buyer for $10,000.

SAID TO THE MIRROR.

Gracie Emmett: "I wish to thank you for your just criticism of my performance of A Countess for Revenue Only in your issue of Oct. 6, and I agree with you that it is best for me to continue to play Irish comedy parts. This seems to be the general opinion of managers and the press, so I shall return to my former success. Mrs. Murphy's Second Husband, until I can secure another Irish comedietta to replace it."

CUES.

Mabel Montgomery began her season in Zaza at Norfolk, Va., on Oct. 5, and is said to have made a good impression.

Kyrle Bellew will speak before the Chicago Chapter of the Actors' Church Alliance at the Fine Arts Building, 203 Michigan Avenue, on Oct. 11, at 3 P. M. All members of the profession are invited to attend.

Guy Caufman left Kansas City, Mo., on Oct. 1 for Vancouver Island, B. C.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Harry K. Hamilton (Helene Reicks) at their home in Cleveland, Ohio, on Sept. 26.

Channing Pollock addressed the Playwrights' League at a meeting yesterday on "The Reception of Plays in Different Cities." The league purposes increasing its scope by admitting women playwrights to membership.

Walter C. Jordan has secured a judgment against Robert T. and Genevieve Haines in $1,315.

The Stolen Story will be withdrawn from the Garden Theatre next Saturday night for revision by the author. It will be sent on the road the latter part of November. Clay Clement in Sam Houston will succeed it at the Garden on Oct. 16.

Arthur and Zimmerman have bought from Cora Maynard a new play entitled Chivalry and founded on the story of Launcelot and Elaine.

The new Lincoln Theatre will open at popular prices on Oct. 30. The best seats will be $1.

Louise Muldener has been engaged for His Majesty and the Maid company.

MUSIC NOTES.

The forty-ninth Worcester Musical Festival was held from Oct. 1 to Oct. 5. Thirteen noted soloists, which is twice as many as Cincinnati provides, and a chorus of 400 school children were heard. On account of the number of singers the programmes were unusually long, but no novelties were given. The audiences showed a decided preference for the concerts at which the high salaried artists appeared, rather neglecting the choral nights, which are generally considered the chief feature of a music festival. The affair was a distinct success financially.

The United States Marine Band gave a concert at the Hippodrome on Sunday, Sept. 30. The programme ranged from "Bedella" to Tannhauser. There was a good audience present, and the applause was generous.

The Institute of Musical Art will begin its regular session on Monday, Oct. 15. Very few changes in the faculty have been made, the most notable being the engagement of Adrian Freni, a pupil of Stockhausen.

The most excellent reports are being received by Sweely, Shipman and Company from Marie Narelle, the prima donna soprano, who is touring Australia under the management of Frederick Shipman. Since the opening of Miss Narelle's season in Australia the attendance at her concerts has exceeded that of Madame Melba.

Jessie Maclachan, assisted by an excellent company of Scottish artists of note, has been breaking all records in Canada since the opening of her season, Sept. 14.

The Kaiser Wilhelm de Grosse had a very notable passenger list, musically when it arrived in New York last Tuesday. The regular mid-ocean concert for the widows and orphans of German and American seamen was a very brilliant affair. The passengers were treated to the unique spectacle of the ship's band, the members of which serve in the dual capacity of musicians and stewards, being conducted by Dr. Karl Muck, first director of the German Imperial Opera and successor to Gericke as conductor for the Boston Symphony Orchestra; by Leoncavallo, composer of Pagliacci, Zaza, and Chatterton, and conductor for the celebrated La Scala Orchestra from Milan, and by Arturo Vigna, conductor of French and Italian opera for the Metropolitan Opera House. Sam Franko, Yvette Guilbert, Elisabeth Parkina, R. Hageman, and Madame Hageman Van Dyk also contributed to the same programme. A prominent manager is said to have groaned that he would cheerfully have posted a $10,000 guarantee for such a performance here in New York, while the entire proceeds for the one on shipboard did not exceed $600.

OBITUARY.

William R. Weston, a well-known musical director, died suddenly of acute indigestion at his home in Brooklyn, N. Y., on Sept. 25, at the age of forty-nine years. He was born at Stafford Hollow, Conn., in 1857, and came of a musical family. He entered the theatrical profession about thirty years ago in San Francisco, Cal., and during his career had been connected with Emerson's, Reed's, Comstock's, and Dockstader's Minstrels, the Reilly and Wood's Show, the Nelson Family, John L. Sullivan, Lester Walters, and the St. Felix Sisters company, generally filling the positions of musical director and business-manager. It was during his connection with the last named he met and married Charlotte St. Felix, the youngest of the St. Felix Sisters. He was one of the organizers of Culhane, Chase and Weston's Minstrels, and during the first two seasons was the musical director. For the past five seasons he has filled the position of musical director at the Music Hall, Yonkers, N. Y., and at the time of his death was an active member of the firm of Culhane, Chase and Weston. He was a member of the Royal Arcanum, also the New York and Yonkers Musical Union. Interment took place at Evergreen Cemetery, Brooklyn, on Friday, Sept. 28, in the family plot. He is survived by his widow, his brother and three sisters.

John Brawn, father of John P. Brawn, the well-known whistling comedian now with the Southern College Widow company, died in Toronto, Canada, on Sept. 19, of cerebral hemorrhage, after an illness of five days. Mrs. John P. Brawn (Ethel Brooke Ferguson) was telegraphed for, and hastened to her father-in-law's bedside, where she remained with him until he died. The body was brought to New York and interred in Greenwood Cemetery. The late John Brawn had many friends in theatrical circles, and was greatly interested in professional people and all that pertained to his son's work. He was a member of I. O. O. F., No. 20, and of the Morning Star Council of the Royal Arcanum. He was a life long Republican, and of late years had taken an active interest in the politics of his home city, Brooklyn. He is survived by two sons, James H. and John P. Brawn, and one daughter, Mrs. P. J. Collison, wife of the printer and publisher.

Mrs. Annie Clark, a trapeze performer with Cole Brothers' Circus, who was accidentally shot by her husband several weeks ago, died at the King's Daughters' Hospital in Staunton, Va., October 2. It appears that Mrs. Clark interfered between her husband and another man who were fighting over some trivial matter, and the pistol in Clark's hand was discharged, the bullet entering his wife's abdomen. Just before she died she made a statement exonerating her husband from all blame. Mrs. Clark's remains were interred in Staunton.

Thomas M. Reilly, advance agent for The Old Homestead, died at Milford, Mass., on Oct. 1, of typhoid pneumonia, after an illness of two weeks. He was a native of Brockton, Mass., and had been in the theatrical business for a number of years. At one time he was well known as a comedian and dancer, but preferred the business side of the theatre to the life of an actor. He leaves five brothers and one sister, none of them in the profession. The body was taken to Brockton for burial.

Alpha W. Meskimen, one of the best known musicians in Iowa, died in Manchester, Ia., on Sept. 21, of consumption. For several seasons he was the solo cornetist with the Ringling Bros. circus band and has been connected with various orchestras in Iowa at different times.

The father of Mercetta Esmond, a prominent railroad official connected with the Erie and Pennsylvania Railroads, died on Sept. 28 at the age of sixty-one, after an illness of several weeks, of cirrhosis of the liver. He had a wide circle of friends among professionals.

paper man. Tully Marshall is also extremely real in the character of the assistant city editor, and Augustin Daly Wilks plays the office-boy, Tommy, to the life. Joseph M. Sparks acts a very low comedy Irishman, Jerry McCarter, in a very low comedy manner, suggesting the green whiskered caricature of vaudeville. Wright Kramer is stagey as Gilbert Townsend. R. Peyton Carter as General Cunningham is given but small chance to display his talents. Stephen Wright is satisfactorily cast as Jake Shayne and John R. Armstrong is adequate to the role of Nordheimer. Harry Stone as Harry Lascelles, John Doyle as Mr. Henderson, the political reporter, and James Seeley as Mr. Manning, the managing editor, are all well cast. The numerous small roles are satisfactorily played.

Wallack's—Popularity.

Comedy in three acts, by George M. Cohan. Produced Oct. 1.

Robert Rand	Thomas W. Ross
James Fuller	Frederic De Belleville
David Burnside	John Jack
Donald Burnside	Edgar Selwyn
Stage-Manager	Marcus Moriarty
Daly
Burke	Tim Cronin
Regan
Franklin Fielding	William Keough
Jonesy	Loree Grimm
Joseph Wilson	Howard Stevens
Tanaka	Sacharo Oida
A Stage Hand	Sam Flanigan
A Property Man	Frank Kelly
Marion Vanderveer	Florence Rockwell
Gertrude Fuller	Adelaide Manola
Mrs. Fuller	Harriet Ross
Adrienne	Edythe Moyer

George M. Cohan announced before the arrival of his latest effort that he had no idea of rivaling Ibsen, Pinero, or Jones when he constructed this affair, and disclaimed any intention of appealing to "a serious and critical public." His purpose, he said, was only to amuse and entertain. So by this pre-natal explanation he has disarmed serious criticism, and one must think of his first attempt at legitimate drama from the viewpoint of the part of the public that desires only to be amused and entertained. If the reviewer should forget and try to analyse the piece he would find many crudities in construction, many impossible characters, some coarseness, almost vulgarity, in the dialogue, and the general impression of a jerry-built structure, left considerably awry by a careless, overactive workman. But since the author has requested that such things as dramatic unities or plausable situations be not considered, it would be unjust to refer to the lack of them. Let the audience put itself into a proper state of mind and "holler for Rand when the lights go out in the second act," as it is politely requested to do by a line on the programme, and it will be ready to receive what Mr. Cohan has to offer in the way of humor, pathos and melodrama.

The plot is simple and direct. When it has finished developing one is ready to rename the play The Reward of Freshness; or, A Guide to Bad Manners. The hero is one Robert Rand, an actor so overburdened with popularity that his name is given to impossible cigars and hopeless racehorses. He falls in love with Gertrude Fuller, a matinee girl and the daughter of a millionaire who made his money in stove polish, and since she is in love with him, they become engaged without first consulting the father or Gertrude's fiancée, Donald Burnside. The first news Gertrude's parents have of the intended alliance they find in an evening paper. Naturally they are disturbed. The father tries to dissuade his daughter from what he considers will be a mesalliance, and the lover, who is a cad, reviles her in an extremely ungentlemanly manner for what he calls her faithlessness. A Mrs. Vanderveer, from New Orleans, whom Donald has introduced into the Fuller family, also comes in for her share of the blame from the young man. He even goes so far as to threaten to "tell it all." At once it is seen that Donald and Mrs. Vanderveer have a mutual secret. Then Rand calls upon his prospective father-in-law, and before five minutes have passed one feels a tremendous sympathy for the older man. Mr. Rand proves to possess the same sort of breeding as a newsboy, and carries his unmitigated impudence beyond the limit of human endurance. That he is not bodily ejected from the bright red drawing room of the Fuller house is due to his popularity with the special officer sent for to put him out. When he has departed, of his own accord, Donald indirectly accuses him to Mr. Fuller of having illicit relations with Mrs. Vanderveer. Without allowing that lady to explain, the millionaire orders her from his home. Donald says she is going to Rand's dressing-room at the theatre. Naturally the entire family, separately, decide to go there, too, to learn for themselves the villainy of the actor. Only Gertrude goes alone, without telling her parents of her purpose.

In the second act, which shows Rand's dressing-room and a section of the stage just before the curtain rises on the first act of Checkers, the young actor is generally harassed by the different members of the cast. His manager prophesies a loss of popularity if he persists in marrying Gertrude; Mr. Fuller threatens him with untold wrath, and Mrs. Vanderveer calls upon him. Mrs. Vanderveer has made the visit in response to a telephone message, and previous to her arrival has sent a note of acceptance, which note Mr. Fuller appropriates as evidence for future use. Donald Burnside also pays a visit to the stage to see that his plot carries. Rand becomes so disgusted with the badgering of his manager that he refuses to play, and his understudy is made ready to go on with the part. But the supposed audience will have no one else but Rand, and a riot is in the inception when Gertrude steps from behind a pile of hat boxes in the dressing-room and begs him, for her sake, to reconsider. He does, and then all the lights go out. In a moment Rand is standing before the real curtain, making a speech to the real audience, which has unwittingly become a part of the play. The lights go out and on again, and again the dressing-room is seen. Nothing of consequence happens before the curtain goes down.

The first scene of act three takes place at Mrs. Vanderveer's apartments. Mr. Fuller and Donald's father call upon her, and after threatening her with exposure learn that Donald is the real culprit and that Rand's name is unsullied. Donald, too, visits her, and Mr. Fuller, behind a curtain, hears the young man condemn himself. The second scene is in the lobby of the National Theatre. Mr. Fuller, satisfied to call Rand his son-in-law, arranges a dinner party for everybody concerned, gets Donald's promise to be good and marry Mrs. Vanderveer, and departs arm in arm with the fresh young actor.

A company of excellent actors comes near making a real play out of Popularity, in the face of the author's statement that he wanted it to be simply an entertainment. Thomas W. Ross, remembered for his excellent work in Checkers, is able to make Rand somewhat likeable in spite of the insufferable impudence of the character. He acts with a certain alertness that creates a semblance of sincerity in the melodramatic passages, and gives to some of the commonplace scenes a dignity not found in the lines. Frederic De Bellville makes a gentleman of the character of Mr. Fuller, though it is questionable whether a well-bred man would deliver himself of many of the speeches set down for him. John Jack, though at times unintelligible, gives a good characterization of the choleric David Burnside. In the caddish role of Donald Burnside, Edgar Selwyn does some excellent acting. The role is the only one offering any marked difficulties, and Mr. Selwyn is capable of surmounting them all and of arousing a kind of sympathy in a character almost entirely despicable. William Keough is well cast in the role of Franklin Fielding, Rand's manager, and Loree Grimm plays Jonesy, the call boy, with his usual skill. Tim Cronin in the double role of Burke, the fireman, and Regan, a special officer, acts satisfactorily, and Marcus Moriarty is adequate to the requirements of the roles of Daly, the butler, and the stage-manager. Howard Stevens as Joseph Wilson, Rand's understudy, shows considerable ability, and Sacharo Oida, a real Japanese, plays Rand's valet naturally.

Florence Rockwell does some extremely good work in the character of Mrs. Vanderveer. The quality and control of her voice is noticeably good. Adelaide Manola as Gertrude is also to be credited with much ability, and also deserves praise for her voice. It is a pleasure to listen to such clear enunciation as she gives. Harriet Ross finds trouble in making anything human out of the character of Mrs. Fuller, though it is not the fault of Miss Ross. Edythe Moyer satisfactorily fills the small role of Adrienne, Gertrude's maid.

The entertainment is well stage-managed, and many of the extraneous scenes show much cleverness. The settings of the first and third acts are garish and disagreeable to look upon.

Bijou—The Genius.

Farce-comedy in three acts, by William C. and Cecil de Mille. Produced Oct. 1.

Jack Spencer	Nat C. Goodwin
Otto Vogelsberger, a musician	Nell O'Brien
Victor Le Mercier, a painter	Robert Paton Gibbs
Brian McGonigal, a sculptor	Gordon Johnstone
Percival Clutterbuck	H. G. Lonsdale
Cyril Farquhar	Carey Livingston
Josephine Van Dusen	Louise Randolph
Cyrus Jenkins	M. B. Snyder
Mrs. Van Dusen	Rose Snyder
Lilly Scott	Leslie Bingham
Miss Trevor	Evelyn Walls
Mrs. Van Browne Smith	Mabel Reed
Nell Graham	Edna Goodrich

In response to a vigorous demand for a curtain speech on his opening night last Monday at the Bijou Theatre, Nat Goodwin said that he was glad to be there, "presented by himself." With his late managers he had left a trail of tombstones, but he was setting out "to eradicate the epitaphs." Several tombstones must have toppled Monday evening, for in The Genius, furnished by the Messrs. de Mille, Mr. Goodwin is at his best, and his best means a jovial part in light, easy modern comedy with a leaning toward farce. Warned by the tombstone epoch, he knows the public must have what they want when they want it. What they want is Goodwin, Goodwin unbearded, undisguised. In The Genius he is his own genial self.

The plot of The Genius was given at length in THE MIRROR, when the play was produced in Brooklyn last November, under the title of The Genius and the Model. Reviewing briefly, it is the story of one Jack Spencer, who, unendowed with talents in the artistic line, sets out to buy them by the yard. He becomes the fad of the hour, and suffers all the attendant discomforts of lionism. He falls in love with a Trilbyesque model, named Nell Graham, but is engaged to Josephine Van Dusen, who loves him for his art's sake alone. He manages to convince the latter that to marry her would be to kill his inspiration, so she sacrifices her love on the altar of art—with a capital A—and leave the Genius with his Model.

The farce, which is frankly such, with no attempt to dress itself up in the borrowed plumes of high comedy, is lively and wholesome. The satire is keen, and the play abounds with bright epigrammatical speeches and comical situations. It is the kind of fun "that wrinkled care derides," the kind that brings forth "laughter holding both his sides." If it is a little thin waisted at times one does not go to a farce to stretch one's mental arm uncomfortably.

In the role of Jack Spencer, genius, Nat Goodwin deserved all the American beauties that adorned the foyer. He brought out the subtleties of fun in a way that tickled his audience like a feather, the characteristic, confidential Goodwin way. Nell O'Brien did a capital piece of work as Otto Vogelsberger, the German musician, and Robert Paton Gibbs was nearly as good as the French painter. Gordon Johnstone as Brian McGonigal, the third of the artists, was not in the same class of excellence, but gave variety to the trio. H. G. Lonsdale drew a clever caricature of a critic in Percival Clutterbuck, while M. B. Snyder and Carey Livingston were fair in lesser roles.

Edna Goodrich's acting was not pitched in the same key as the rest of the cast, and dragged with the weight of an affected slowness. She is very pretty, and was graceful to the point of making one forget minor faults. Leslie Bingham giggled infectiously as Lilly Scott, and Louise Randolph entered into the mock seriousness of her part with praiseworthy results. Small parts in the hands of Rose Snyder, Evelyn Walls, and Mabel Reed completed the list.

West End—A Millionaire's Revenge.

Melodrama in four acts, by Hal Reid. Produced Oct. 1.

Harold Daw	Brinsley Shaw
Stanford Black	Louis E. Miller
Benjamin Franklin	Master Martin
Billy Brown	Walfred Wilson
Thomas Meade	James Burrows
Jack Watson	John Henderson
Henry Matson	William Campbell
Joshua Dingle	Harry J. Lane
J. Henderson Smith	Bobby Nolan
Winston Russell	Ralph Sanford
Timothy Darrell	Fred Cooper
Charles Blackburn	William Abbott
Benjamin Dustin	John Rose
Martin	Charles Goodwin
John Murphy	Robert Keith
Dan McGlone	C. Sparks
Walter	Eddie Mack
Kate McElroy	Louise Mitchell
Eloise Daw	Alice Seymour
Mrs. Wilson Daw	Bertine Robison
Samantha Dingle	May E. McKay
Alice Walton	Alice Seymour
Myrtle Stone	Grace Smith
Mabel Keats	Maysie Harrison
Annie Wilson	Kathryn Flynn
Emeline Hudspeth Daw	Josephine Therese Thill

A Millionaire's Revenge, the latest sample of Hal Reid's brand of melodrama, was seen at the West End last week. It is a clumsy attempt to put into dramatic shape the recent murder sensation in New York society circles, with some of the events leading up to it. The first act shows the "studio" of Stanford Black, during the progress of an orgy in which he and his friends take part. A huge pie which when opened discloses a beautiful young woman, one of his "models," is a significant incident. This girl later becomes the wife of one of Black's friends, Harold Daw. Black jeers at the pair and openly boasts of previous intimacy with the wife. In act two she confesses to her husband, and in act three he shoots Black as his wife's betrayer. This climax is followed by an anticlimax in act four, where Daw, imprisoned and awaiting trial, justifies his deed in grandiloquent phrases and declares he will never be punished. An interview with his mother brings the play to an inconclusive finish.

The stage-management and company were fairly good. Prominent in the cast was Bertine Robison, who as Mrs. Wilson Daw handled her role skillfully, and although appearing in the last act only, made a most effective showing in the part, playing it with a tact and self-restraint that made the emotional content of her lines clear and impressive. The part of Stanford Black was given in vigorous fashion by Louis E. Miller, while Brinsley Shaw was fervent and declamatory as Harold Daw. An excellent bit was done by James Burrows as the blind musician, Thomas Meade. Louise Mitchell was charming and resplendent as Kate McElroy, a companion of the dissolute Black. Josephine Therese Thill, as Emeline Hudspeth Daw, acted most delightfully, her well-bred, unaffected intonations lending much charm to her lines. Some rustic comedy was capitally given by May E. McKay as Samantha Dingle, and Harry J. Lane as Joshua Dingle. Bobby Nolan, as the out-at-elbows playwright, J. Henderson Smith, made a hit in his small part. Others who were effective in minor parts were Master Martin, Walfred Wilson, John Henderson, William Campbell, Fred Cooper, William Abbott, and Robert Keith. Alice Seymour, Grace Smith, Maysie Harrison, and Kathryn Flynn appeared as "artists' models" and did a little dancing turn.

This week Nat M. Wills in A Lucky Dog.

Yorkville—A Lucky Dog.

Musical play, by Mark H. Swan and George E. Nichols. Produced Oct. 1.

Happy Holmes	Nat M. Wills
Reuben Hankins	Charles W. Udell
Lal Chunder	Joseph Egnenton
Herbert Dalton	James Vincent
Sam Lark	Peter Griffin
Victor Strong	Miller Bacon
Gregory Kent	Fred Bannells
Ram Dass	Morley Peake
Jos Simmons	Jay Shaw
Tom Porter	David Rosenthal
Angeline Pettijohn	Della Stacy
Madeline Grey	Carrie Thomas
Cora Norman	Anita Zorn
Sarah Darnley	Lee Hobbs Martin
Alice Vaughn	Mae Harrison
Babette St. Vrain	Ninon de Varenne
Phyllis Cavanaugh	Edna Mitchell

Catchy music, a well-drilled chorus, and Nat Wills' eccentric acting more than serve to offset whatever improbabilities of plot there are in Broadhurst and Currie's latest production. The music, if somewhat reminiscent, is bright and pleasing, and each number is the signal for several encores. In fact, except when Nat Wills is on the stage, more music and less talk would be welcomed.

Wills portrays his usual part of the kind-hearted tramp, who acts as the deus ex machina in unraveling the knotty portions of the plot. His droll humor keeps the audience in a constant uproar, and his parody singing is encored again and again. As the plot makes no pretence at probability and frankly introduces supernatural agents it would be unfair to apply to it the usual dramatic standards. It serves, however, its object of carrying on the action, and the episode of the hypnotic ring is the cause for numerous amusing complications.

The plot hinges on the theft of a magic ring from the finger of a Hindo god. Whoever wears this ring has the power of obtaining whatever he wishes. Herbert Dalton, the villain of the play, formerly known as "Welching Jimmy," a crook, has stolen the ring, and now is seeking to make his fortune by a marriage with a rich young woman. The action opens at Furnwood School, where the heiress, Madeline Grey, has been sent by her uncle, Gregory Kent, a crabbed old collector of curios, to keep her away from the attentions of Victor Strong, a young man with whom she is in love. Sarah Darnley, the mistress of the school, is a sister of Dalton, and is in a conspiracy to force Madeline to marry her brother, and thus obtain control of her fortune. At this point Lal Chunder, the priest of the idol from whose finger the ring was stolen, arrives in search of the thief. He meets Angeline Pettijohn, a maid servant, who tells him that Dalton has the ring. The priest then gives her a similar ring, though one without the hypnotic power. Dalton soon arrives, and makes love to Madeline. He attempts to place the magic ring upon her finger, but is repulsed, and the ring falls to the ground, where it is found by Happy Holmes, a tramp, who is really Madeline's brother. Madeline then elopes from the school with Victor, and Chunder, who has discovered that Dalton is the thief, threatens him with death if he does not return the ring. The next act is in Kent's Museum, where Victor brings Madeline back to her uncle. Dalton arrives in search of the ring, and, seeing the duplicate ring on Angeline's finger, takes it from her in the belief that it is the ring he has lost. Chunder, however, tells him that it is not the ring, and informs him that unless he returns the ring within an hour the god will kill him. Dalton, now wild with fright, sets off again on his search. He at length gets the real ring from Angeline, to whom it had been given by Holmes, and is about to use its power to force Madeline to marry Sam Lark, a confederate of his, Dalton's wife having appeared and prevented his own marriage, when Holmes again obtains possession of the ring and returns it to Chunder amid a general reconciliation.

Nat Wills, of course, bore off the honors, his song "Beautiful Bed," in which is sung the glory of the sleepy life, being applauded until he had to stop from sheer exhaustion. His first entrance, when he climbs upon a gate-post to escape a savage dog, was extremely funny, as were his antics when in possession of the magic ring. The expression of surprise that spread over his face, when for the first time in his life he obtains whatever he wishes, was an excellent bit of acting. Charles W. Udell as the Yankee inventor and Delia Stacey as the maid servant ably seconded him in his mirth-provoking efforts. Carrie Thomas as the young heiress, besides being good to look upon, has a sweet, if not a strong, voice, and sang her one song most acceptably. The other members of the cast were adequate, especially Peter Griffin as the young tough, and James Vincent as the villain.

This week, The Burglar and the Lady.

At Other Playhouses.

AMERICAN.—Florence Bindley in The Girl and the Gambler played a successful engagement here last week, attracting large audiences. This week, $10,000 Reward.

PARK.—Oscar Dane and his company appeared in Rip Van Winkle on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday and in East Lynne on the other three nights of last week.

KEITH AND PROCTOR'S 125TH STREET.—Hoodman Blind was presented to the usual capacity audiences. Paul McAllister in the part of Jack Yeulett was uncommonly strong. William Norton, whose popularity is constantly increasing, had the role of Mark Lessard, one of the most disagreeable villains ever devised for the harassing of a hero and heroine, and he handled it with consummate skill. This is one of the best opportunities Mr. Norton has had this season and he took full advantage of it. Beatrice Morgan had the dual role of the sisters Nance and Jess, and was equally good in both parts. Agnes Scott, Dudley Hawley, William Herbert, George Howell, George Manning, Mathilde Deshon, and Al Roberts were in the long and efficient cast. The olio included Charles and Fanny Van, the Gagnoux, and Nellie Kullman. This week The Little Grey Lady.

NEW YORK.—Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch ended a successful engagement here Saturday night. The current bill is Blanche Ring in Miss Dolly Dollars.

HACKETT.—Mr. Hopkinson, with Dallas Welford and an English company, began a week's engagement here last night, previous to starting on a road tour.

METROPOLIS.—Me, Him, and I, the popular musical play, did good business here last week. This week, Carolina.

FOURTEENTH STREET.—The Southern play, Carolina, proved a drawing attraction here last week, and the work of the very capable company was thoroughly enjoyed, especially the acting of Helene Hadley in the principal role. This week, Ninety and Nine.

THALIA.—Queen of the Highbinders met with favor at this house last week. The Burglar's Daughter this week.

STAR.—The Gambler of the West was a popular attraction here last week. From Tramp to Millionaire this week.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Blanche Walsh appeared here last week in The Kreutzer Sonata. This week, Frank Daniels in Sergeant Brue.

THIRD AVENUE.—The Russell Brothers in their success of last season, The Great Jewel Mystery, was the attraction here last week. James and John Russell appeared in the variety of characters in which they have met with so much favor, and John Russell, Jr., was seen in a quadruple role. The rest of the cast was as follows: Tom Croxton, Frank R. Spencer; Simon Stokes, Royal Thayer; Simmons, Joseph Bond; Robinson, Colonel William Hexter; Swaney, Charles R. Fogg; Marty, John Burt; Lucy Tempest, Annie Conroy Russell; Hilda Keene, Jessie Charron; Cissy Carlisle, Flora Bonfanti; Charlie, Mary Macarty; Sallie, Annie Gould. This week, For Her Sake.

SPENT $50 WITH DOCTORS.

Got Barber's Itch From Shaving—Worse Under Doctor's Care—Cured by One Set of Cuticura—Cost $1.

"I want to send you a word of thanks for what the wonderful Cuticura Remedies have done for me. I got shaved and got barber's itch, and doctored with my own doctor, but it got worse all the time. I spent in all about fifty dollars with doctors, but still it got worse. A friend of mine wanted me to try the Cuticura Remedies. As I had tried everything, I was discouraged. I bought one set of the Cuticura Remedies (Soap, Ointment and Pills, cost $1.00), and they cured me entirely, so I cannot praise them too much. I would be willing to do most anything for the promotion of a cause like the Cuticura Remedies. They are wonderful, and I have recommended them to every one where occasion demanded it. I think every family should know about the Cuticura Remedies where they have children. Allen Ridgway, Station Master, the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, Barnegat Station, N. J., Oct. 2, 1905."

BOOKS REVIEWED.

New Shakespeareana for October contains the conclusion of R. L. Ashhurst's article on Shakespeare's Falstaff Triology, in which he accounts for Falstaff's absence from Henry V by showing the technical difficulties adherent to the transference of the fat knight from England to the French battlefields. He thinks, also, that The Merry Wives of Windsor was finished before Henry V, Queen Elizabeth having very probably commanded Shakespeare to show her Falstaff in love. There are also discussions on the Northumberland Manuscript, and the usual notes and marginalia of interest to Shakespearean students.

The Theatre Magazine for October is of special interest to all interested in the drama. Henry Arthur Jones contributes a "Plea for the Printed Drama," in which he declares the reading of plays necessary for the proper uplifting of the intellectual level of the theatre. Thomas Walsh has an article on the dancers of Spain, Elise Lathrop gives an account of Madame de Cisneros, Mr. Hammerstein's new contralto, and Ada Patterson has an interview with Dustin Farnum. James K. Hackett writes of his stage beginnings, and Virginia Frame has an article on "Women Who Have Written Successful Plays." The pictures include photographs of Grace George in Clothes, Madame Kalich in The Kreutzer Sonata, Ellis Jeffreys in The Dear Unfair Sex, and Doris Keene in The Hypocrites, and scenes from His House in Order, The Chorus Lady, The Man from Now, and The Little Stranger.

WISCONSIN THEATRE BURNED.

The Ripon Opera House, at Ripon, Wis., owned by C. P. Haseltine & Son and managed by A. B. Carter, was totally destroyed by fire starting in an adjoining building early on Sunday morning, Sept. 30. The house and contents were valued at $15,000, with insurance $13,500. It will probably not be rebuilt.

THE CHORUS.

THE Kansas City Journal waxes merry over the advent of the theatrical year, and particularly of the chorus. "We are now well within the gladsome season when the blithe chorus girl, clothed in her right mind, etc." it says, "scampers nimbly from the wings and twinkles her all too brief time before the footlights." And it adds:

Whatever weight of weariness and disappointment the enervating months have held for us, we hail the coming of the chorus as a gloom-dispelling enchantment that will cheer the Winter's journey. Whence come these resplendent creatures we should not too closely inquire. Perchance yon mountain nymph once purveyed to us a spool of thread, or mayhap that diaphanous water sprite was wont to bring us our matutinal "ham and," or eke the husky amazon may have counted "flat work" in some cleansing studio. It matters not, for in the mysterious transmutation of the stage all dreams come true.

Truly, it matters not what avocation has thrown the chorus girl into her vocation, if she is ambitious to prosper on the stage and in time become one of its legitimate ornaments. There are too many newspapers that disseminate erroneous impressions as to this class of stage workers, a majority of whom deserve encouragement as students of a great artistic institution which later many of them may credit. Indeed, lightly as some regard this class of figurantes, there are clever players who have developed from this field, which is presumed to appeal only to the vision of the public. And no lack of ambition of the right sort or frivolous behavior on the part of some in the chorus can affect the legitimacy of the endeavor of those in it who succeed because they deserve to succeed.

But this amusing essay on the chorus girl is but the preamble to animadversion by the Journal on the chorus man:

But what of those grotesque figures who amble about in the background classed as "chorus men"? Whoever has a word to say of pity for their cheerless lot? They come and go like stiff mannikins, without the hope or wish or expectation of a sympathetic smile. The best they can hope for is a song or two while the "ponies" are changing their scant embellishments. And this is time begrudged by the audience. Rarely indeed does a male chorus gain the passing favor of an encore. The "chorus men" are simply stage accessories, moving bits of scenery, who are expected to remain in the background and come in strong on the "ensemble" numbers. Once in a while we see a stage full of "chorus men" floundering about and trying their best not to appear more awkward than Nature intended them to be. They form in a straggling line, generally as a band of robbers or pirates or something equally as reprehensible, and about the only "stunt" in which they shine is when they get compressed air jags as they gulp great quantities of atmosphere from battered tin goblets in honor of their "chief" or of the heroine's wedding day. The average "chorus man" is the embodiment of self-conscious distress. He is about as graceful as a scarecrow, and the vacuity of his expression gives the impression of hang-jawed stupidity. When anything is happening on the stage of which he is not a vital part he merges into the background of rocks and trees as though invoking a friendly heaven to obscure him forever.

Sometimes a fly is found in amber; and it is not to be expected that the men of a chorus should be stars proudly winging their courses. It would seem that Kansas City, too, has been most unfortunate in the theatrical attractions embodying supernumeraries offered to it of late. Nowadays, most attractions of the first class that call for supernumerary figures carry at least a well-trained nucleus, and in each city with such examples quickly train local youth ambitious to appear on the stage into a seemly company. If any attraction has of late shown in Kansas City such burlesques of a multitude as the writer of the foregoing has seen in fact or in his dreams, the fault is local. It may be that Kansas City has among its young men who desire to shine on the stage few that can conduct themselves with becoming grace under instruction, and this may account for the grotesqueries that seem to have blinded the Journal to the ordinary merits of the chorus man.

Some of the famous actors of the past carried spears—and probably carried them with little grace—in their elementary days in the theatre. And it is within the bounds of possibility that the clumsy supernumerary of to-day may delight a coming generation as a highly artistic player.

AS EXPECTED.

ACTOR-MANAGER BOURCHIER, of the Garrick Theatre, London, has receded from the position he recently assumed as to critics and criticism in that metropolis.

It is remembered that he practically excluded the critics from his theatre, assuming that a critic could not do justice to a production according to the time-honored custom of writing for the morning journal a review of a performance of the night before.

This actor-manager wished the critics to see his productions at leisure, and write about them at greater leisure. One of his arguments was to the effect that a play is not really in good running order until a week after its production; and thus that the critics should observe the perfecting process and not write about the production until all was going smoothly. Yet no doubt the manager-actor expected the public to patronize and witness the effort during this progressive period.

Having been practically ignored by the London press since his stand against present methods of the critics, Mr. BOURCHIER last week addressed the editors and humbly entreated them to permit criticisms of his play to appear in their journals. He asks this "in justice to the author of the play and those cast in it"—persons whom he should have considered in the first place. A cablegram from London says that "the chances are that the editors will retain their Bismarckian attitude toward Mr. BOURCHIER and let him continue to stew in his own juice."

Whether they know it or not, this episode is crammed with suggestion to certain managers in this city and country who have thought by high-handed means to abolish criticism of the drama.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

[No replies by mail. No attention paid to anonymous, impertinent or irrelevant queries. No private addresses furnished. Questions regarding the whereabouts of players will not be answered. Letters to members of the profession addressed in care of THE MIRROR will be forwarded if possible.]

M. T. D., San Francisco: Charles Kemble and Mrs. Siddons were brother and sister. Fanny Kemble was Charles Kemble's daughter.

S. A. A., Charlestown: The Mikado was first produced on March 14, 1885, at the Savoy Theatre, London. George Grossmith was Ko-Ko and Leonora Braham Yum-Yum.

L. S., Cleveland: William Gillette's first appearance was in Faint Heart Never Won Fair Lady at the Globe Theatre, Boston, on Sept. 13, 1875. Otis Skinner's debut was in Woodleigh, at Wood's Museum, Philadelphia, on Oct. 30, 1877.

W. C. T., Norfolk: The original Florodora sextette was composed of Margaret Walker, Vaughn Texsmith, Marie L. Wilson, Marjorie Relyea, Agnes Wayburn and Daisy Greene. It opened at the Casino on Nov. 1, 1900.

L. M., Boston: King Charles I, one of the plays made famous by Sir Henry Irving and announced by H. B. Irving for his present American tour, was written by William Gorman Wills. It was produced at the Lyceum Theatre, London, on Sept. 28, 1872.

L. M. L., New Rochelle: Dion Boucicault's Irish drama, The Colleen Bawn, was founded on Griffin's novel, "The Collegians." It was originally produced in New York in December, 1859, and first performed in London on Sept. 10, 1860, with the author as Myles. This story, "The Collegians," had previously been dramatised by T. E. Wilks as early as 1831, when the play was produced at the Milton Street Theatre, London, with Mrs. Chapman as Elly O'Connor.

PERSONAL.

MARLOWE.—Julia Marlowe sold her handsome residence on Riverside Drive near 106th Street last week. The house is one of the finest on the drive.

MITCHELL.—Julian Mitchell, who was threatened with pneumonia, has completely recovered.

HAMILTON.—Mr. and Mrs. Harry K. Hamilton announce that on Sept. 26 they "signed a life contract to manage a new star, Baby Harry Lee Hamilton."

BEHMAN.—Henry Behman, of the firm of Hyde and Behman, is reported as being very ill with pneumonia at his home in Brooklyn.

GOODWIN.—Nat C. Goodwin is rehearsing a new play, entitled The Way of a Gentleman, to be put on at the Bijou later in the season. There was an unverified rumor afloat last week that Mr. Goodwin and May Irwin would appear as joint stars some time in the future.

JONES.—Henry Arthur Jones is expected to arrive in America the last of this month. He will lecture at Yale University on Nov. 5.

BERNHARDT.—For the third time the question of conferring the Cross of the Legion of Honor on Sarah Bernhardt is under consideration by the Grand Chancellery of the Order.

TANGUAY.—Owing to the illness of Eva Tanguay the tour of A Good Fellow has been interrupted and the company recalled to New York to await her recovery. Miss Tanguay is suffering with a throat affection which may necessitate an operation.

DE WOLFE.—Drina de Wolfe has been engaged by Charles Dillingham for Man and Superman.

LANGTRY.—When Mrs. Langtry arrived in New York and saw herself billed as "Mrs. Lily Langtry," she waxed indignant, and within a few hours billposters were busy obliterating the "Lily" with strips of white paper. It is said that for her vaudeville appearances at the Keith-Proctor houses Mrs. Langtry is receiving $2,000 per week, and that the transportation expenses of herself and her company are paid by the management.

JAMES.—Louis James celebrated his sixty-fourth birthday at Boseman, Mont., on Oct. 3. The members of his company observed the occasion by decorating his dressing room with flags and flowers and presented the actor with a handsome silver loving cup.

SOTHERN.—E. H. Sothern fainted on the way to the railway station Sunday, from exhaustion, due to hard work at rehearsals. He was revived and took a train to Philadelphia with Julia Marlowe.

KALICH.—Bertha Kalich is recovering rapidly from the operation for appendicitis recently performed, and is expected in an unusually short time, under the circumstances, to be able to take up her tour in The Kreutza Sonata.

MR. WILLARD IN HIS REPERTOIRE.

E. S. Willard and company began an engagement of one week last night at the Russell Theatre, Ottawa, with David Garrick and the Man Who Was. The programme for the other nights of the week is—Tuesday night, A Pair of Spectacles; Wednesday night, The Professor's Love Story; Thursday and Friday nights and Saturday matinee, Colonel Newcome, and Saturday night, The Middleman. Though there has been some disposition to criticise Mr. Morton's play, the verdict on Mr. Willard's acting of Colonel Newcome has been one of unanimous indorsement, and it is regarded as one of the finest of his many admirable impersonations. The popularity of the performance in Montreal was such that after the first night the "standing room only" sign was put out for every performance of the new play. It will be the principal feature of Mr. Willard's repertoire throughout his tour.

FAIR FOR THE ACTOR'S FUND.

Daniel Frohman, president of the Actors' Fund of America, announces a fair to be held for the benefit of the Fund during the first week in May. Heinrich Conreid has tendered the use of the Metropolitan Opera House, which will be turned into a bazaar. All the resident actors and actresses will take part. Frederick Thompson, of Thompson and Dundy, has promised to take an active interest in the project. The committee in charge consists of Alf Hayman, Charles Burnham, William Harris, Joseph Grismer, and Joseph Brooks.

AN OLD AMATEUR SOCIETY.

The Amateur Dramatic Society of Le Sueur, Minn., holds a unique record among amateur societies in the United States. The association was founded forty-four years ago in the early pioneer days as The Thespian Society by John B. Parker, of Le Sueur, and has been in existence ever since. Jennie Smedley, of North Carolina; Mrs. A. W. Banga, of Rapid City, S. D., and John P. Hoyt, of Minneapolis, are among the charter members still living. The society claims that it has never made a failure of a play.

MARCH OF THE INDEPENDENTS.

Opening in Kansas City Marks the Advance in the West—Press Comment.

The opening of the new Sam S. Shubert Memorial Theatre in Kansas City, Mo., is about the most important recent outward and visible sign of the advance of the Independents. This theatre was inaugurated on Oct. 1, with Eddie Foy in The Earl and the Girl. That Kansas City heartily welcomed the opening of a free theatre was evidenced by the crowd which attended the first performance. Every seat in the house except the gallery seats was disposed of on the day the sale opened, and the receipts for that day amounted to more than $4,000, and the house was crowded during the entire week of the engagement, indicating that the theatregoers were hungry for good plays.

The Independents also made an entry into Des Moines last week, when the theatre in East Des Moines, formerly known as the Mirror Theatre, was opened with Before and After on Oct. 3.

Says the Kansas City Journal in commenting on the opening of the Sam S. Shubert Theatre there:

"Ordinarily the mere opening of a new theatre in Kansas City would not be of such importance as to attract wide attention. Peculiar interest, however, attends the inauguration of the Sam S. Shubert Theatre, for this new playhouse heralds the emancipation of this city from Trust domination which it has so long suffered.

"Kansas City is recognized everywhere as a 'good show town.' Here there is a public that is ever ready and anxious to spend money for first-class entertainment. Unfortunately, until now every good attraction at one theatre has been doled out to us by a grudging Syndicate that played fast and loose with the public. Good attractions have been succeeded by miserably poor ones, and theatregoers have had to pay the price set by the whims of traveling managers.

"The Shubert Theatre will bring to Kansas City a line of entertainments heretofore unknown here. Some of them will be seen here before their appearance in New York. While there is no especial advantage in this, it is an indication of the recognition, tardy as it is, that Kansas City is on the theatrical map. When it is remembered that it is unusual for a city of less than 400,000 people to support nine theatres, the advantage of the Trust-opposing system in locating here is obvious. The theatrical business is a cold-blooded proposition. The Shuberts are business men with the single idea of making money. They did not come to Kansas City to establish a philanthropic enterprise. The field looked good to them, and that is all there is to it. Had the Syndicate acted in perfect good faith there would have been no demand for another playhouse. If the Syndicate houses suffer from the new competition they will have no one to blame but themselves—or, rather, the Trust."

The Indianapolis News, in a long editorial on the promises of the present theatrical season, laments that none of the Independent productions will be seen in Indianapolis this year. It says:

"For this season, at least, we shall have no opportunity to see many of the foremost actors and actresses of the day. In the last few months there has been a marked exodus of leading stars from Trust management to Independent control, and the change, wherever it has occurred, will withdraw them from the list of those appearing in Indianapolis. We may, therefore, have for our season's amusement, if the Trust so dictates, only the less important plays of the year, or those plays of the last two or three seasons that still prove attractive, many of which we have already seen once at least. It is certain, however, that we shall have none of the Independent companies."

The Des Moines Register and Leader speaks as follows about the advent of the Independents last week:

"The opening of the Shubert, the Independent theatre, is the theatrical event scheduled for tonight. This is the first time since the organization of the Theatrical Syndicate about ten years ago that an "outside" attraction has been able to appear in Des Moines. Within the past two years the Independent theatrical forces have gathered a great deal of strength, and while they have not as many attractions as the Syndicate, there is no denying the merit of the line they offer. The Shuberts, who have charge of the bookings of the anti-syndicate theatrical firms, have long sought for an opening in Des Moines, and contracted for the appearance of their attractions at the rechristened Mirror with the hope that the strength of the offerings would cause West Side theatregoers to cross the river. The future of the house will be watched with considerable interest."

ANOTHER SUIT AS TO OLD HEIDELBERG.

Emanuel Lederer believes in protecting his copyright of Old Heidelberg. After bringing an action in which a permanent injunction was obtained against George Morehead for a wrongful translation of Old Heidelberg, an action was brought against Dick Ferris, who had played the Morehead translation, to recover the penalties in such cases under the United States copyright laws. Mr. Lederer then discovered that Brentano's had imported and were offering for sale the French translation of Old Heidelberg, under the time of Vieil Heidelberg. An action has been instituted against Brentano's to recover $1 for each sheet of the book exposed for sale at Brentano's, and Judge George C. Holt, of the United States Circuit Court, has issued a writ to the United States Circuit Marshal to seize any book in possession of Brentano's. Persons who own copyrights under the United States laws have ample protection if they will only proceed to enforce their rights. The proceedings against Ferris and this action against Brentano's are the first of their kind to be brought for the offense charged in these cases.

MEETING OF EDWIN FORREST LODGE.

The regular monthly meeting of Edwin Forrest Lodge, Actors' Order of Friendship, was held at the house of the order on Sunday, Oct. 7. Four new members were initiated. Monthly reports show the order to be in an excellent condition as to finances and steadily increasing in membership. Notification of the deaths of Brother Archibald Cowper and George Clarke was received and officially acted upon. Mr. Cowper was one of the charter members of the lodge and its first secretary. While funeral services were being held over the remains of George Clarke at his home in South Norwalk, under direction of a committee of the Order, touching eulogies were being delivered in the lodge room by President Joseph Grismer, Milton Nobles, and Clay M. Green.

AMERICAN DRAMATISTS' CLUB ELECTS.

The annual meeting of the American Dramatists' Club was held on Oct. 6 at No. 114 West Fortieth Street. The following officers were elected: President, Bronson Howard; First Vice-President, Joseph I. C. Clarke; Second Vice-President, Charles Barnard; Treasurer, Richard A. Purdy; Corresponding Secretary, Mark E. Swan; Recording Secretary, Charles Klein; Directors: Harry P. Mawson, Milton Nobles, William C. de Mille, Edwin Milton Royle, and J. J. McCloskey. The annual dinner will be held at Delmonico's on Dec. 2. Charles Klein will be the guest of honor.

AMUSEMENT COMPANIES INCORPORATED.

The following amusement companies have been incorporated at Albany with the Secretary of State during the past week: Biondi Panoramic and Amusement Company, of New York, having a capital stock of $300,000; directors named as M. Santangelo, A. F. Biondi, and G. Biondi, of New York. The Opera Comique Company, New York, capital $25,000; directors, W. Bailey, J. F. Symes, and E. H. B. Mackey. Jules Murry High Class Amusement Enterprise (Inc.), New York, capital $20,000; directors, J. Murry, E. P. Lyons, and E. Laski, New York.

THE USHER

THE MIRROR has received a letter from E. L. Paul, manager of the Wolford stock company, in which a reorganization of the Actors' Fund is advocated. The writer contends that the Fund as at present organized is intangible and does not have the undivided support of the rank and file of the profession. He goes on to say:

The motives which cause men to become members of, say, the Masonic fraternity or the Elks, are at base selfish ones; and if examined will be found to consist in the main of a desire to gratify personal vanity, a desire to penetrate the mystery of the thing; the hope of personal advancement, and the pleasure derived from being one of a class apart from the rest of humanity.

These motives, of course, must be considered apart from those which prompt a man to join a fraternal insurance order, and there is no good argument to advance why they are not perfectly legitimate ones, as they are basic and elemental.

The time is ripe to reorganize the Actors' Fund along lines that will appeal to the great masses of men and women in the amusement world; a tangible, real flesh and blood order, to which it would be an honor to belong; an order broad enough to include every white worker in the vast field of amusement, when a badge of the order on the lapel of a man's coat would proclaim him a member of an active organization that he could see and feel, and on which he could rely, in a measure, in time of need.

Mr. Paul has correctly stated the appeal of the fraternal societies he names. Yet it is a question whether the Actors' Fund could be reorganized on like lines, even if those in charge of it should adopt such a plan. This is so because the fraternal orders mentioned, as well as others not mentioned, maintain local lodges, and in each community make a special appeal, while to the member of one of the orders who occasionally travels, local lodges are open, with their arts of fraternity to give fellowship to the traveler. It is out of the question, however, to establish local lodges or branches of the Actors' Fund, and as most members of the theatrical profession are traveling much of the time, an order on fraternal lines, the base of which naturally must be New York, would lack the common attraction of such orders.

Much has been said as to the function and the responsibility of the dramatic critic, who to some persons is a useless wheel in the machinery of publicity, and to others a guide, philosopher, and friend. This editorial expression in the Milwaukee Sentinel is so earnest and withal so pertinent that it is worth reprinting:

Probably few people realize the responsibilities of the person serving in the capacity of dramatic critic and the number of people and the variety of interests his work affects. First of all, there is his duty to the public. If he misleads his readers he will make them unhappy if they follow his advice in spending their time and their money on certain entertainments. He may not mislead them often, as it will not take them long to learn that he is not a safe guide.

In some respects his position is not unlike that of a judge on the bench, and it should be borne in mind that, like a judicial officer, he does not make the case before him. If a prisoner is guilty of a crime it is the prisoner's fault, and he must not hold resentment against the judge who imposes the penalty. If a play is bad it is not the critic who made it so, but the dramatist. If an actor is lacking in the requirements of his art he may have missed his calling or neglected the study of his profession. The critic is not the cause of the unfortunate circumstances.

Like a judge in a law court the critic to a certain extent influences the possession of property. A favorable verdict from the critic may mean large financial returns to author, manager and actor. In the end the public decides what it deems worthy of support and governs itself accordingly; but the opinion of a just critic has much to do with the success or failure of a drama.

The critic has a delicate task in making an estimate of the ability and performance of an actor. The profession of acting is unlike most other occupations. The merchant or manufacturer is not accustomed to having the quality of his goods discussed daily in the public prints. The physician, engineer or lawyer does not know what it is to have his handling of every case or problem made a matter of public discussion. But every week during the theatrical season the actor must undergo criticism upon his work and his personality.

The veteran is often as sensitive to this inspection as the tyro. Hence the task of the critic is pleasing or painful as he is able conscientiously to praise or condemn. And a majority of those he is called upon to estimate are of the gentler sex. If he performs his duty with due regard alike for the public and for the player he is deserving of high praise. Like the player, he is himself the daily subject of comment by thousands of persons, according as they agree or disagree with his conclusions if they, too, have seen the performance under consideration. The fair and able dramatic critic earns a laurel wreath at the end of each season in which he has formed his conclusions honestly and impartially.

What is commonly known as "a fit," though pathological science gives it varying, long and polysyllabic names, is a harrowing thing to see in ordinary circumstances. Thus, when a man falls with one of these strange seizures, general pity usually goes out to him and follows him in an ambulance.

Circumstances, however, "alter cases." A ticket speculator who plies his trade at one of the Broadway theatres where success has perched the other day tried to make a passer-by a momentary partner in his business. The management of the theatre is said to have become so careful in its scrutiny of would-be ticket buyers that ordinary speculators, who by various tokens are pretty well known, cannot buy seats at this box-office.

The speculator who figures in this story beguiled a passer-by to take $40 and buy him seats therewith. The passer-by took the money, entered the theatre lobby, and after making a show of buying escaped through the convenient door of a pharmacy in the building. The speculator waited, with a natural impatience, until the truth dawned upon him. Then in his pecuniary anguish he "threw a fit."

Nobody but the speculator's mercenary fellows seemed to have bowels of compassion for this victim, and this suggests a prime topic for a debating society as to the uncertainties of human commiseration.

An English journal says that Caruso, "during his engagement at the Kursaal, Ostend, received £400 a performance; but the Casino, as usual, was the chief gainer, the popular singer being credited with having lost the whole of his fees at the tables."

This is an impertinent bit of gossip, yet it is piquant and suggestive.

If it be true, it is likely that the great tenor will gladly hie himself to this country again. The "fees" no doubt will be quite as generous here, thanks to the operatic war that is impending in New York, as at any grand opera point abroad. And here, thanks to the embargo on games of chance, the singer will not be tempted to lose his money.

ELSIE JANIS SUES RAILROAD.

Suit was filed in the United States Circuit Court at Toledo, Ohio on Oct. 2 by Elsie Bierbower (Elsie Janis) and her mother Mrs. J. E. Bierbower against the Grand Trunk Railroad for $10,000 damages. The plaintiffs claim that in 1904 they were put to great inconvenience through an alleged misstatement by an agent of the railroad. They purchased tickets from Toronto to Grand Rapids, Mich., with the understanding that they would be able to reach the latter city by 1.30 P. M. They aver that they were compelled to wait at a way station, without suitable protection from inclement weather, and that Mrs. Bierbower contracted a severe cold, which confined her to her bed for eight weeks, during which time her daughter could not pursue her theatrical duties.

KATHLEEN KERRIGAN.

Kathleen Kerrigan, whose picture appears on the front page, is a Louisville beauty who made her debut in that city in Pygmalion and Galatea, and whose success caused her to be immediately engaged for leading parts. She originated the title-role in the play of Niobe soon after her debut, and has ever since remained a leading woman. Miss Kerrigan is tall and graceful, with large eyes which indicate her unusual mental and temperamental gifts. She is at present the leading woman with Clay Clement in his big production of Sam Houston. She plays the first Mrs. Houston, who was a noted Southern beauty, and she has received in all cities visited enthusiastic praise for both her appearance and her ability.

FRANK LEA SHORT SPEAKS.

In an address in Carnegie Hall on Oct. 4 to several hundred literary people, Frank Lea Short, director of classic plays at Yale, said the conditions confronting young playwrights in America are deplorable. "Writers and players are subjected to countless humiliations before they find a market for their work. This stunts and often crushes talent that is worthy of a hearing," said the speaker. Mr. Short is a director of the American Dramatic Guild, which has been formed for the purpose of bettering conditions of young American playwrights.

THE COUNTY CHAIRMAN FOR LONDON.

Final arrangements have been completed which takes George Ade's comedy, The County Chairman, to London next April. Theodore Babcock will be seen in the title-role, supported by the same company as now en tour with him. Walt M. Leslie will have charge of the London engagement and will sail early in March to complete his plans for the tour. Claud S. Boyer will stage the production in London, using entirely new scenery made there. There will be over 200 extra people used.

H. B. IRVING'S REPERTOIRE.

The repertoire of H. B. Irving at the New Amsterdam next week will be as follows: Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday matinee and night and Saturday, King Rene's Daughter and The Lyons Mail; Thursday, Friday, and Saturday matinee, King Charles I. Paolo and Francesca will be continued all this week.

GUARDIAN THEATRE OPENED.

The new Guardian Theatre at First and South Division Streets, Peekskill, N. Y., owned by the Roman Catholic Church of the Assumption, was opened on Oct. 1 with Veronique. The majority of the boxes and seats were sold at auction ten days ago. The highest price paid for a box was $100 and the lowest $35.

TO REBUILD SAVANNAH THEATRE.

It has been practically decided to rebuild the Savannah Theatre, at Savannah, Ga., which was burned a week or so ago. The walls are intact, and the owners of the building intend to utilize them for the reconstruction of the house along the same design as before. It is expected that it will be finished by Dec. 1.

LILLIAN RUSSELL ROBBED.

DEATH OF GEORGE CLARKE.

George Clarke, who died on Oct. 3 at his home, 14 Union Park, Norwalk, Conn., was one of the last of the old school actors who were successful in combining with the modern stage the traditions of Edwin Forrest. The cause of his death was diabetes, from which he had suffered for two years. Mr. Clarke leaves a widow, his mother, Mrs. Peter O'Neill, and a sister, Mrs. Robert Fenner. A niece, Mrs. Julia E. Bogart, has lived with Mr. and Mrs. Clarke for several years.

George Clarke—his real name was George O'Neill—was born in Brooklyn on June 28, 1840, and as a boy attended school at Richmond, Va. He early showed a fondness for the stage, becoming a member of the Richmond Dramatic Association, and when his parents moved to Portsmouth, Va., joining a similar association in that city. His professional debut was made as juvenile man with the Hight and Hyde Dramatic company at the Holliday Street Theatre, Baltimore. He then bornstormed through Virginia with the Kunkel, Ford and Moxley company until 1859, when he came to New York, appearing at Barnum's Museum.

In 1862 he joined Mrs. John Wood's forces at the Olympic Theatre, and in 1864-65 was a member of the Boston Theatre Stock company. He then appeared at the New York Theatre as Bob Brierly in The Ticket-of-Leave Man, and afterward supported Lucille Western at the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia. He took a leading part in the dramatization of Henry Ward Beecher's "Norwood," and afterward toured in Under the Gaslight. During 1868-69 he was stage manager and leading man for Edwin Forrest, and later was under Jim Fiske's management in Sardou's Patrie at the Grand Opera House.

In 1869 Mr. Clarke received his first engagement from Augustin Daly, appearing at the Fifth Avenue Theatre as Malvolio in Twelfth Night. For the next five years, with a few short intervals, he appeared continually under Daly's management. During this period he appeared as Touchstone in As You Like It, Biron in Love's Labour's Lost, Fred Sinarley in Charity, Monsieur Octave in Dumas's Monsieur Alphonse, Lord Basil Clovering in What Should She Do? Lyttleton Coke in Old Heads and Young Hearts, George D'Alroy in Caste, Bronsely in Wives as They Were, Airy in The Busybody, Marquis Andre in Fernande, Tom Robinson in Never Too Late to Mend, and Chrysol in The Palace of Truth. During the short intervals in which he was away from Daly Mr. Clarke appeared at Wallack's Theatre with William J. Florence in Eileen Oge. He finished the season of 1871-72 at the Varieties Theatre, New Orleans, where Lawrence Barrett was stage manager and where Minnie Maddern (now Mrs. Fiske) played child's parts. He also appeared with Stuart Robson and Augustus Pitou.

In 1874 Mr. Clarke quarreled with Daly and left his management, not returning until 1886. He opened the season of 1875-76 with Mrs. Clara Rousley at the Fourteenth Street Theatre, and then went to London, where he was enthusiastically received, appearing at the Opera Comique in Proof Positive, and touring the provinces in The Shaughraun. When at Rochdale Robert Mantell made his debut in Mr. Clarke's company, playing Father Dolan to Clarke's Con. He later played with Charles Wyndham in Pink Dominoes.

He returned to New York in 1878, appearing in Boucicault's Dead Reckoning and afterward in A. M. Palmer's Mother and Son. In the Autumn of 1879 he opened at Niblo's in Hearts of Steel, and soon afterward joined A. M. Palmer's company at the Madison Square Theatre, appearing in Hazel Kirke. In 1882 Fanny Davenport engaged him for her leading man, and in September, 1883, he took the same position with Clara Morris. In the Spring of 1884 he appeared in the Rahjah and The Young Mrs. Winthrop at the Madison Square. In the following year he played Inspector Byrnes in The Pulse of New York, and Victor Durand in the play of that name, by Henry Guy Carleton. During 1885-1886 he was a member of the stock company at Wallack's Theatre.

In the Fall of 1886 he again joined Augustin Daly's stock company, now appearing at Daly's Broadway Theatre, and remained as a valued member of that company until Mr. Daly's death in 1899. From this time on Mr. Clarke was identified largely with comedy parts. Between 1886 and 1899 he appeared as Lieutenant Darby in Pinero's Dandy Dick, Adam Grimmidge in The Railroad of Love, Leicester in The Critic, Captain Duretelle in The Inconstant, Sparkish in The Country Girl, Christopher Sly in The Taming of the Shrew, Colonel Von Kleek in The Passing Regiment, Jacques in As You Like It, Jacques Leroux in The Prayer, Theseus in Midsummer Night's Dream, Young Fashion in Miss Hoyden's Husband, the Secretary in The Last Word, Joseph Surface in The School for Scandal, Harry Davosh in A Night Off, Donald Littlejohn in Love in Tandem, Richard Cœur de Lion in Tennyson's The Forresters, John Guthrie in Little Miss Million, Master Walter in The Hunchback, the Prince of Waldo in the Heart of Ruby, the Duke in The Two Gentlemen of Verona, Captain Rolando in The Honeymoon, Dexter in The Transit of Leo, Dazzle in London Assurance, Leonato in Much Ado About Nothing, Dick Hatteraick in Meg Merrilies, Colonel Britton in The Wonder, Prospero in The Tempest, Petruchio in The Taming of the Shrew, Falstaff in The Merry Wives of Windsor, and Antonio in The Merchant of Venice.

When Augustin Daly died in 1899 Mr. Clarke's fidelity was recognized in Daly's will. In October, 1900, he appeared at Keith's Union Square Theatre in A Match for a King, a condensed version of Don Cæsar de Bazan. His last appearance was last Winter as the Senator from Oregon in Augustus Thomas' Embassy Ball at Daly's Theatre, where he so often had pleased playgoers.

George Clarke's death leaves Ada Rehan the sole survivor of Daly's original company. His death was specially untimely, as he had just finished gathering the materials for his biography, which would have been a record of the stage for the last half century that perhaps no one could have equaled.

Though he never reached the foremost rank in his profession, George Clarke was an actor of varied range and decided ability. In his younger days he appeared as the sentimental lovers in romantic and society comedy, and in his later days he was equally successful in character parts. Mr. Clarke held that the best American character actors were at Weber and Fields, and the success of David Warfield went far to prove his theory. At one time he was desirous of founding an endowed theatre in Philadelphia, but the scheme fell through. As a man George Clarke was generally popular and trusted, and his death will be a heavy blow to his hosts of friends.

The remains were buried in the family plot at South Norwalk, Conn., on Sunday, Oct. 7. The Episcopal burial service was read, after which the simple and impressive service of the Actors' Order of Friendship was rendered by a committee from Edwin Forrest Lodge, of which the deceased was a member. F. F. Mackay, a life-long friend, was chairman of the committee and delivered a most eloquent address. Cecil Kingstone and Charles F. Booth were other members of the committee.

THE TOP AS A STAGE DEVICE.

William F. Rochester, the well-known stage-manager, has invented a unique stage device, which he has had patented. It is in the shape of a gigantic peg-top, and is designed for use in musical plays where girls are employed, or for vaudeville purposes. The top is hollow and is covered with silk of any color. It is apparently wound up by girls, who pull ribbons attached to the sides. Inside the top are several girls, admitted by a concealed door, and when the top begins to spin they thrust their heads and then their arms through orifices arranged for this purpose. The girls on the outside stand on an invisible wire platform, grasping handholds, while the top revolves. Finally a principal girl rises through the center of the top on a small elevator, where she may sing or execute a dance. The platform on which she stands does not rotate. The top may be of any size over seven feet, and may be made to rotate at any speed desired. Many novel light effects have been devised for it, and Mr. Rochester has four other devices entirely different which may be employed with the same mechanism. Patents have been granted for all features.

IRVING PLACE COMPANY ARRIVES.

The new members of the Irving Place Theatre company arrived in New York on Oct. 6 by the Kaiserin Augusta Victoria. The Irving Place season is to open with Philippi's Des Helfer. Those who arrived Saturday included Fraulein Marie Immisch, of the Stadt Theatre in Leipsic; Fraulein M. Bratt, of the Kleines Theatre, in Berlin; Fraulein Greta Haas, of the National Theatre, Brunn; Herr Emile Reiter, of the Royal Theatre, Prague; Fraulein Millie Reimann and Frau Trude Voigt, of the Raimund Theatre, Vienna; Herr Adolf Winds, of the Royal Theatre, Dresden, who will be stage manager as well as actor; Karl Mackold, who is to be a new leading man; Frederich Holthaus, Willie Kaiser and Fritz Leidl.

FELL INTO A POND.

Walter Clark Bellows, manager of the Bellows Stock company of Denver, Col., sustained a fracture of the left shoulder and a badly sprained ankle by falling into the fish pond in Klitch's Gardens when on his way to the theatre. The grounds were not lighted and the pond was not visible in the dark. Mr. Bellows was sent to St. Luke's Hospital, but soon recovered sufficiently to be removed to his home at Thirty-eighth Street and Winona Court, where he is now resting comfortably.

SOIREE CONCERT AT THE BIJOU.

The first "soiree concert" of the season, under the direction of L. Cobients and L. Verande, was given at the Bijou Theatre Sunday night, Oct. 7. There was a large attendance from the French colony. The programme consisted of twelve numbers, all musical, except for a single one-act play entitled Par La Fenetre. This was a vivacious bit of French comedy, written by Georges Feydeau, and acted by M. and Madame Verande. A sketch, with music, by Victor Masse, entitled Les Noces de Jeanette, was also given.

A NEW THEATRE FOR BROOKLYN.

A new theatre is to be built in Brooklyn. It will be erected on Flatbush Avenue, opposite the Long Island Railroad Depot, which is also a Subway station. By arrangement with the railroad company, special trains will be run between Brooklyn and Long Island towns. M. R. Bimberg is back of the enterprise, and he and his associates have secured a piece of property 100 feet wide by 140 feet deep. The name of the new house has not yet been decided on.

ENGAGEMENTS.

Sydney Diamond, with Roselle Knott in The Duchess of Devonshire.

Charles T. Del Vecchio and Alice Bolton, for the Western As Told in the Hills company.

Grace Farnum, with the Howard Brandon Amusement company, to originate the leading feminine role in Saved from Shame.

Maude Granger, for The Shulamite.

Harry Davies, for Tivoli Opera company.

THE LONDON STAGE.

(Special Correspondence of The Mirror.)

London, Sept. 29.

Our recent glut of new theatricals dropped this week to one English comedy, The Silver Box, to wit, at the Court Theatre, and one little American-made operatic travesty—namely, Singing to Burn, at the Empire Theatre of Varieties. I am glad to be able to report that in both cases success was achieved.

The Silver Box is written by a new author, one John Galsworthy, but although new to the stage and although even eschewing, forsooth, that most important factor in playmaking—love interest—the new dramatist nevertheless contrived to make a profound impression by the skillful way in which he set forth his simple little story. This story revolved around the theft of a silver cigarette box—a theft committed by a young fool who had been looking on the wine when it was red and the whisky when it was straight. Any disclosure as to the real thief would in this case involve the revelation of the fact that the young owner of the box—a member of Parliament's son—has been out supping with a very notorious lady, whose handbag containing some loose gold the M. P.'s son has purloined in a drunken freak. Therefore (as, alas! happens too often in this best of all possible worlds) an innocent person is suspected and charged. This innocent person is a poor little charwoman, a simple little soul whose honesty is of the most transparent character and whose self-sacrifice is of the most pathetic nature. This poor little creature and those belonging to her suffer a good deal before something like justice is done at the end, when a cynical vein of pessimism is indicated by the brilliant author.

As is usual at the Court Manager Vedrenne Barker cast the piece splendidly. James Hearn as the Member of Parliament, A. E. Matthews as the son, Frances Ivor as the M. P.'s wife, that clever character-actress, Sydney Fairbrother, as an unknown lady; Norma McKinnell as the silver box stealer, and Irene Rooke as the falsely accused woman, all acted in the most artistic manner. So successful indeed was The Silver Box that I should be surprised if it does not make a run for itself instead of merely having three sets of two matinees a week as at first arranged.

Say, I forgot. There was one other theatrical production, but this, like Mr. Midshipman Easy's wet nurse's baby, "was only a very little one." It was a dainty comedietta, by Captain Robert Marshall, and was entitled A Wire Entanglement. It was acted at the Comedy Theatre in front of the highly successful play, Raffles, which has proved one of the biggest successes in London.

The gallant captain's little piece is written around two journalists, one of each sex. During the proceedings they become somewhat mixed up per telephone and thus cause a good deal of muddle to their respective journals, namely, the Union Jack and the Tiara. Of course, as you may guess, Cupid cuts the little Gordian knot and all ends happily, with the prospect of "Wedding Bells for Her"—not to mention him. The two lovers were played well by Sarah Brooke and Grahame Browne.

But although our theatrical output has been somewhat limited this week, you must not think that we have been without sensations, not to say alarums and excursions. By no means. My hints during the last week or two must have prepared Mixnon readers for a huge outburst of what I may call in this connection Vaudeville volcanics. When I say Vaudeville, of course I refer to the theatre of that name, where (as I whispered to you) trouble was brewing all on account of Camille Clifford having been given a new Gibson girl song.

A few hours after I mailed you last Saturday a storm broke out in all its violence. In other words, the beautiful Edna May having fumed through the week, handed in her resignation and "walked out of the theatre," as stage folk say. Edna's reason for this resignation was that (according to her) any such new song, especially this one, should have been given to her, or at all events, should have been submitted to her as the two hundred pound a week star of the show.

How the aggrieved Edna poured forth her grievances daily to several interviewers at once; how Camille vouchsafed her opinions in like manner and like frequency; how both picture post card pets asserted that each loved the other dearly and wept over the dissensions; how the great little Frohman cabled suddenly (and as I think most strangely) to sever his contract with the Gattis; and there and then how little Phyllis Dare (aged 16) was fetched back by Poper Dare (or Dones) to take the stellar Edna's place at the Vaudeville—is not all this writ in the chronicles of the cablegram?

Speaking of Phyllis Dare, I rejoice to tell you that a series of foul slanders in which the slanderers have connected her name with that of Seymour Hicks have at last been traced to one of their sources. A young man giving himself the stolen surname of Dare and thinking thereby to pose as the brother of Phyllis and Zena (whose family name, as I have hinted above, is Dones) was arrested in Liverpool last Saturday night, and was brought up for examination at the local police court on Monday. The scandalizer then and there confessed that he had uttered and written the libel complained of, which was that Seymour Hicks had drugged and seduced Phyllis Dare, who, as I have indicated, is even now little more than a child. The magistrate learning from the prisoner that he had uttered these foul lies for the purpose of getting money, was committed for trial. I may add that so frequent and so persistent have these cruel rumors been that I am not surprised at learning from Hicks that he means to try to arrest and punish a few more of the slanderers. Next week I hope to be able to report that he has done so.

The aforesaid Burning to Sing, by librettist Burnside and composer Kerker, caught on at once at the Empire on Monday, much scoring being made in the respective male and female leading parts by Otley Cranston and Anna Hickisch. On Wednesday night, however, this blithe burletta had to be left out of the bill owing to warbler Cranston having lost his voice. He has since found it, however, and is again nightly burning to sing.

Many on your side as well as on ours will be glad to learn that Frank Boyd, editor of the smart little Pelican and one of the best fellows in the world, is now getting around after a long and severe illness.

As I write we are preparing to divide ourselves between two new productions to-night—namely, Yellow Fog Island, a new burlesque, at Terry's, and The New Aladdin, the new extravaganza for the Gaiety. This working per fissure, as it were, is awkward for those critics who do not happen to be like Sir Boyle Roche's bird—in two places at once. But I dare say we shall manage it.

Also as I write the Waldorf is preparing to close again after a fortnight's run of Mrs. Temple's Telegram. Despite the failure of the play to attract, comedian William Morris (U. S. A.) has made himself so popular both as actor and man that I am not surprised to learn from him just now that he intends to return to these shores anon with another and a better play.

Likewise I have just learned that Mrs. Sims Reeves, the beautiful young widow of the late great octogenarian tenor, Sims Reeves, has returned from Australia and will on Monday reappear on the London halls. That George Alexander, who has returned to the cast of Pinero's splendidly successful play, His House in Order, at the St. James', will next produce there either a new comedy by Alfred Sutro or poet Stephen Phillips' new version of Faust. That Edna May has received several huge offers to go into the variety (or vaudeville) houses. That the great To-and-Froh-man has just cabled to forbid her taking any such engagements, as he wants her forthwith for a new play at another West End theatre. And that Mrs. Patrick Campbell may presently resign her character in The Boudman (which has caught on big at Old Drury), and that Kate Rorke may take Mrs. Pat's place there.

I may as well mention that that big and old established music hall (or variety theatre), the Oxford, has just been much improved in its seating and its refreshment bar arrangements. Hitherto the bars (especially on the stalls and pit level) were so close to the seats that any act set upon the stage (excepting of the dumb show kind was wont to interfere sorely with the babble at those bars. All this is now altered, and American visitors who are generally so numerous at the Oxford will now find the place very comfortable and much beautified. The Oxford's new manager, C. Blythe Pratt, being a man of literary culture, would doubtless remind me that Lord Chamberlain Polonius remarked that "beautified is a vile phrase." I know it is and I apologize, but it is the best I can think of to describe the Oxford's new decorations.

On Sept. 17 at the Fulham Theatre, which is on the Middlesex bank of the Thames at Putney Bridge, there was produced a new drama called The King's Signet. It was originally called The King's Mistress, but our Licenser of Plays refused to pass that name. It proved a somewhat interesting, though rather muddled history play of French interest, the king who possessed the mistress being Louis de Valois. There was considerable advance booming, owing to the fact that its heroine was to be played by "the beautiful American actress," Marie de Campi. The prelim. para. stated that Miss de Campi "comes with a big reputation from America and hopes to make even a bigger one here." Finally these communiques added that Miss de Campi hoped to present ere long The King's Signet at a West End theatre. I don't know whether the last-named matter will ever come to pass. If it should The King's Signet will need much strengthening and untangling by its author, who was billed as "Watson Bay," but who is, I understand, the clever actress, Maud Williamson, who played the King's mistress and played it nobly. Miss de Campi, who is indeed fair to behold, displays much ability in spite of the fact that kind friends in front strove hard to mar the proceedings by cheering her every entrance and exit and striving hard to encore her every speech.

Gawain.

VIOLET BARNEY.

An exceptionally clever leading woman, who has been successfully associated with various stock companies throughout the country. In commenting on her ability, the Springfield (Mass.) "Homestead" says: "Violet Barney has made an excellent impression by her refinement of manner and graceful bearing. Miss Barney makes her points without ranting, and has become a great favorite of women auditors. She is a conscientious actress. Of slight figure, she is tall and stylish in appearance, and carries herself gracefully. Her voice is low and sweet in tone, yet she has no difficulty in making herself heard in any part of the house. As some of her enthusiastic admirers expressed it, she has a 'beautiful voice.' There is in it a note of refinement and sweetness that appeals to all hearers." Speaking of Miss Barney's voice, the "News-Scimitar," Memphis, Tenn., says: "Miss Barney is the fortunate possessor of a strong, sweet voice." "Evening Record," Traverse City, Mich.: "Her voice at all times was magnetic and modulated." "Commercial Appeal," Memphis, Tenn.: "She possesses a most beautiful voice." The Brooklyn "Eagle:" "She has an attractive voice and plenty of magnetism." "Times-Democrat," New Orleans, La.: "She has a good, clear voice and knows how to use it." New Orleans "Item:" "An agreeable disappointment when Miss Barney's soft, sweet voice was heard." New Orleans "States:" "Her voice was gentle and forebearing." New Orleans "Picayune:" "She is soft-toned of speech." Pittsburgh "Dispatch:" "She has wonderful control of her voice."

DEATH OF CHARLES BARRINGER.

Charles Barringer, an actor well known on the New England circuit, died on Oct. 6 in St. Vincent's Hospital, Worcester, of consumption. He was born in New York fifty-one years ago, his real name being Charles Fagan. He was a page in the United States Senate during Grant's administration, and made his stage debut with James O'Neil. He was leading man in the old Selwyn Theatre in Boston, afterward the Boston Theatre, and was Annie Pixley's leading man for three years. He created the part of Sun Locks in James W. Harkins' The Land of the Midnight Sun. He played the Lothrop circuit in Boston, Providence, Worcester, Portland, and Pawtucket, with Kate Glassford and Ethel Tucker, and for a time was a member of the Park Theatre Stock company of Worcester. Six years ago he went with Corse Payton to Brooklyn, where he remained till last May. He returned to Worcester in broken health and was cared for by the Eagles at the Rutland Sanatorium. He came back to Worcester four weeks ago in a hopeless condition. He has a brother, Thomas Fagan, somewhere in the United States, but his friends do not know his whereabouts.

THE DUCHESS OF DEVONSHIRE.

The Duchess of Devonshire, in which Roselle Knott is being starred by Sweely Shipman and Company, had its premier at Newburg, N. Y., last night (Oct. 8). Miss Knott is said to have made a decidedly favorable impression in a role well suited to her art. Her supporting company includes Theodore Hamilton, Franklin Roberts, Eric Blind, Wedgewood Norvell, Harry Mills, Robinson Newbold, Mario Marjoroni, Andrew Robson, E. A. Locke, James McGregor, A. W. Page, P. J. Maccord, Francis Brandon, J. K. Whitmore, Ann Codrington, Viola Knight, Blanca West, Claire Colwell, Madge Dudley, Mary Diskin, and Agnes Findlay.

EDNA AUG IN ACCIDENT.

Edna Aug met with a serious automobile accident in Cincinnati on Oct. 1, when the machine in which she was riding struck a big tree, throwing her and her chauffeur twenty feet ahead of the machine. Luckily Miss Aug's injuries were slight, but the chauffeur was probably fatally injured.

MANHATTAN OPERA POSTPONED.

The opening of the twenty weeks' season at the Manhattan Opera House has been postponed from Nov. 19 until Dec. 3, on account of the Horse Show and the opening of the season at the Metropolitan. No other changes in the announced plans are considered by Mr. Hammerstein.

GUILBERT AND CHEVALIER HERE.

Yvette Guilbert arrived in New York on Tuesday last on the Kaiser Wilhelm from Cherbourg. She had an impromptu reception on the pier at Hoboken and talked of her pleasure at returning once more to the United States and of what she expected to do on the six weeks' tour that George C. Tyler, of Liebler & Co., has arranged for her and Albert Chevalier. Madame Guilbert looks as well as when she last appeared here and seems even more filled with spirits. She was accompanied by her husband, Dr. Max Schiller.

"I am most charmed," she said, "to have returned to New York at such a season. All my friends have told me how charming the city is, and I am to see for myself."

"What do you think of the tour that has been arranged for you?" she was asked.

"Is it not terrible?" she responded, with an expressive wave of her hands, "that Mr. Tyler, who is such an enthusiastic person, that he does not intend that we shall sleep much. It will be to sing and then to travel, and then to sing again; how we will like it is something that remains to be seen.

"You will have an opportunity to see the country, at least," was suggested.

"The country!" she said; "it will be little of that we shall see. One cannot very well witness the beauty of scenery in impenetrable darkness, and I have heard that the American trains do not stop long at a place."

"What songs will you have?" she was asked.

"I will make use of my entire repertoire," she replied. "Such songs as 'Les Souveniers de Lisette,' 'Les Cloches des Nantes' and 'La Belles Manieres,' with several English songs, such as 'The Old Couple,' 'And the Keys of Heaven' and possibly one or two more. I have no doubt I shall be kept busy. Now you must excuse me, as I have letters for home. You know I hate to write, so my husband has bought for me a phonograph, and I just chatter my letters into this, and then mail the cylinder. It has what you may call double advantage, for not alone can I talk much faster in that than I can write, but my mother has the pleasure of hearing my voice."

Albert Chevalier arrived on the Campania on Saturday, and he and Madame Guilbert left on Sunday for Toronto, where the tour begins. After one performance there Montreal is next on the list, then follow Quebec, Springfield, Mass., Boston and the only New York performances, which will occur Saturday, Oct. 13, matinee and night, at Carnegie Hall.

This will be the last opportunity to see either of these two artists in this style of work, for Charles Frohman has arranged to present Madame Guilbert in plays immediately upon the conclusion of the present tour, and Mr. Chevalier on his return to London will enter at once upon a purely dramatic career, something he has long had a desire for and of which announcement will doubtless be made in due course. The artists will visit forty cities in forty-two days, with a total milenge of 23,312, which Liebler and Company, who are managing the tour, believe will break the record.

ACTORS' CHURCH ALLIANCE NEWS.

Local and National Headquarters, 1431 Broadway, New York City.

Mrs. Lettie Ford was hostess at the tea served at Headquarters last Thursday, and among those present were Aimee Abbott, Edyth Totten McGrath, Cora Morland, Mrs. A. L. Place, John Costello, Charles T. Catlin, Adelaide Cherie, Elisa B. Harris, the Rev. F. J. Clay Moran, C. H. Dutton and Damon Lyon.

Mrs. Forbes Curtis and Damon Lyon will serve tea next Thursday.

Coming events of the New York Chapter will be the regular monthly service at St. Chrysostom's Chapel, Thirty-ninth Street and Seventh Avenue, on Sunday evening, Oct. 21. The Rev. Dr. Cartersen, of Riverdale, will preach. The October reception will be held in the parish house on the Thursday following.

The Rev. F. J. Clay Moran, B.D., will give a talk on "Picturesque Japan," with stereopticon views, on Thursday evening, Nov. 9, in the parish house of Christ Church, 336 West Thirty-sixth Street. Members and friends desiring tickets can obtain them at Headquarters at 50 cents each.

THE COUNTY FAIR A SUCCESS.

One of the largest crowds ever assembled in Madison Square Garden gathered there on Monday evening of last week, when the New York County Fair opened, and tremendous crowds continued to pack the Garden every afternoon and evening. Farm animals and vegetables in abundance interested the New Yorkers even more than the circus bill, which is as follows: Dare Devil Babcock, looping the death-trap loop; the Six Flying Banvards; the Nelson Farnum Troupe, acrobats; Professor Arnoldo and his leopards; the Great Alfreno, champion high-wire walker; Harmon Holden, high diver; Joselyn Trio; the Zarnes, double trapese act; the St. Belmos, and Madame Dalila's lions. Manicurists engaged in the first competition of the sort ever held, and a free baby show to be given Oct. 10 are interesting features.

THE "LITTLE CHURCH" CELEBRATES.

The Church of the Transfiguration, known as "The Little Church Around the Corner," celebrated three anniversaries on Oct. 6. These were the fifty-eighth observation of the foundation day, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the daily Eucharistic celebration and the twenty-fifth anniversary of the first vested choir. It was also announced by the rector, Rev. George Clarke Houghton, D.D., that James Potter Dod, the present organist, drilled the first choir.

ARCH SELWYN ABROAD.

Arch Selwyn is in Vienna, where he went to witness a special performance of Klein Dorritt, a dramatization by Franz von Schonthan of Charles Dickens' novel of "Little Dorritt." The special performance was given last week at the Hofburg Theatre under the personal supervision of the author. The play is to be produced in New York this season by a prominent manager. Maude White will play the character of Little Dorritt.

PROFESSIONAL DOINGS.

Shortly before the opening of the performance of Hoodman Blind at Keith and Proctor's 125th Street Theatre on Monday evening, Oct. 1, the stage hands struck and left the house in a body. Telephone messages to the other Keith-Proctor houses brought several men, and the performance went on after a short delay. It is said that the strike was ordered by the local branch of the T. M. A.

Annie Oakley, the rifle shot, who used to be a feature with Buffalo Bill's Wild West, is in Chicago looking after her interests in her suit for libel against the Chicago American. This suit is one of many started some years ago by Miss Oakley against papers that published an account of the arrest for drunkenness in Chicago of a woman who gave the name of Annie Oakley when she was brought up in court. The undeserved notoriety that followed the printing of this libel has aged Miss Oakley and undermined her nervous system to such an extent that she is unable to follow her profession, it is said.

Lisle Leigh produced on Monday night the one-act comedy drama entitled Kid Glove Nan, by Edward Elsner, at Keith's Theatre, Providence, R. I. The cast includes Edward Elsner, Sadie Connelly and Lisle Leigh.

Negotiations were closed yesterday by Thomas W. Ryley whereby Irene Bentley will play the part of the Princess in The Belle of Mayfair, now being presented at the Vaudeville Theatre, London. Miss Bentley, who has not been seen on Broadway in some time, will have the second female role. The originator of the Princess in the London production is Louise Pounds, a sister of the famous tenor, Courtice Pounds.

George Le Guere has been engaged by the Shuberts to originate the part of Jan Vandenberg, the juvenile role in The Shulamite, with Lena Ashwell, which will come to the Lyric Theatre on Oct. 29.

Edwin Thanhouser has acquired a lease of the Star Theatre in Milwaukee, and will put in a stock company there next season. The name of the theatre will be changed and the building remodeled. Mr. Thanhouser has acquired, in addition to the theatre property, land on the Sycamore Street side and at the rear. He will continue as manager of the Shubert Theatre in addition to managing the new enterprise, and intends to put on attractions similar to those presented in the old Academy of Music by his former companies.

J. E. Toole, who has just returned from a six weeks' tour in Florida, has been engaged to direct the rehearsals of the new melodrama, Reflections from the Hearth, by C. P. Carrigan, after which he will direct the plays and tour of Venetia La Vere in her repertoire.

W. J. Deming has been engaged by Nat C. Goodwin to play the Imp in When We Were Twenty-one at the three special matinees on Oct. 18 and 25 and Nov. 1.

Sullivan Brothers, who own the Empire Theatre, North Adams, Mass., have offered the United States Government a choice of two sites for a post office building free of all cost. One site is worth $35,000 and the other about $25,000. They want to have the proposed post office located on land near their stores and theatre.

The tour of George Carson, under the direction of Eldredge and Meakin, will begin on Monday, October 15, at Mount Vernon, N. Y. Mr. Carson's new vehicle will be Hall and Tremayne's farcical comedy, The Morning After.

The engagement of Mrs. Forbes Curtis to Damon Lyon, of Richard Mansfield's company, was announced at a meeting of the Hungry Club last Saturday night. It is expected that the marriage will take place in June.

Emile La Croix, who is heavily interested with others in large plantations in Cuba, may be forced to visit that country to protect his interests owing to the present political troubles.

"Captain Courtesy," a novel by Edward Childs Carpenter, of Philadelphia, which was published this week, is being made into a play by the author for the use of a well-known star.

Guy Standing will make his debut as a star under the Shubert management at Atlantic City to-night (Tuesday) in MacPherson Turnbull's comedy, A Society Policeman. His company includes George Henry Trader, Verner Clarges, W. H. Post, Blanche Stoddard, Ethel Brandon and Maggie Fielding.

Minnie Love, who said she was an actress, was badly injured in an automobile accident at the Vanderbilt Cup races last Saturday, and was taken to the Mineola Hospital on Long Island and later removed to her home.

Sara Macdonald, star of Adrift in New York, is seriously ill with nervous prostration at her home in New York city, and the company has been laid off temporarily.

LAST WEEK'S BILLS.

KEITH AND PROCTOR'S UNION SQUARE.—There was a pleasing air of novelty about the programme last week that made it decidedly attractive, especially to those whose business compels them to see the same acts over and over again. The chief item was the first appearance in America of Hardnin's Electrical Ballet, in a divertisement called Starlight. The act employs two dozen girls and shows new possibilities in the use of incandescent lamps. Some of the girls carry storage batteries and the lamps attached to their bodies change color as they go through a very simple dance. Other girls more elaborately illuminated are added as the act progresses, and the final tableau shows a large group, backed by a curtain of blinking lights that makes a very effective picture. Thomas J. Keough and company was seen for the first time here in a protean sketch called The Way He Won Her, by Henry Rightor. The "he" in the case is a young reporter who is in love with a girl, and he wins her in the same way that many another youth has done the same thing, by making an appeal to the sentimental side of her nature. As a little diversion he assumes the disguises of an Irish servant girl, a Hebrew tailor, an eccentric old man, a German music teacher and a tough politician. Mr. Keough proved himself a versatile performer by giving very good sketches of the various characters. He was assisted by Ruth Francis. Franchlyn and Eva W. Wallace, formerly of the Savage forces, put on a sketch called A Case of Champagne, which is one of the neatest acts of its kind shown here this season. Mr. Wallace is a champagne agent who gets into the wrong house and starts a series of misunderstandings with a young woman, who mistakes him for a minister to whom she has become engaged without having met him. The lines are crisp and the sketch is played with great spirit by Mr. and Mrs. Wallace. Mr. Wallace sang a song at the finish of the act with force and feeling and was warmly applauded. Horace Wright, who has an excellent tenor voice, did a very wise thing to avoid the dress suit costume. He came on disguised as an Italian fruit vendor, and his two songs were well received. He then changed to the make-up of an Irish laborer, and warbled the praises of Killarney very sweetly. Julia Redmond, assisted by Al Haynes and others, was seen for the first time here in a farcette called Too Much Married. The plot is very ancient, and concerns a young man who is receiving remittances from an uncle on the ground that he is married and has two children. Of course the uncle arrives and the youth is obliged to secure some one who will pose as the wife, and so on. The complications are amusing; the act was well played and scored heavily. Miss Raymond made no attempt to monopoline the centre of the stage, but she and Mr. Haynes, as well as Albert Cunningham, Harry Fowler, and Marcia Harris managed to get plenty of fun out of the situations. The climax in which two young goats are introduced is well worked up. The Four Fords danced superbly. Dave Nowlin scored with his imitations until the middle of the week, when his throat gave out and he was forced to retire. His place was taken by Lee Harrison, who did double duty, appearing also at the Fifth Avenue. Kelly and Violette sang "When the Flowers Bloom in Springtime," "Mary Ann," "Toot Toot," and other songs with success. Miss Violette showed some superb new creations in gowns and the women scanned their details eagerly. The Artois Brothers, European acrobats, made their debut, presenting some excellent feats. Bella Veola made a very pretty picture in her black dress when she sang, and later on in tights, while going through her contortion act, was still more pleasing. Dorsch and Russell, with their novel railroad effects, put on an excellent musical act. Avery and Hart made one of the very big hits of the week, and the Pryors opened the bill with some good banjo playing.

KEITH AND PROCTOR'S TWENTY-THIRD STREET.—Emma Carus, most becomingly dressed in a creation of white lace, with pink shoes, etc., made an alluring picture. Chubby with health, and expressing her good-nature in a series of charming smiles, she captivated everybody while warbling into popularity some of the newest efforts of the songsmiths. Her best song was Jack Norworth's "Holding Hands," which she sang in a naive way that caused the audience to insist upon a repetition of the chorus, so that they might hum and whistle it with her. Mr. Norworth was seen in a box one afternoon during the week, and though he refrained from applauding his pleasure was quite evident, as he seemed to feel that full justice was being done to his little song. Carleton Macy and Maude Hall repeated their remarkable hit in The Magpie and the Jay, which has caused more favorable comment than any sketch produced so far this season. Miss Hall's work in the character of Lizzie, the Bowery girl who goes to the country to be married to a man she has never seen, is every bit as fine as that of Rose Stahl in The Chorus Lady. Miss Hall is an artist to the tips of her fingers, and there is not a word or a gesture or an expression misplaced during the entire sketch. It is a rare delight to listen to her as she rolls out bits of the choicest slang, with just the proper amount of toughness, a toughness that has just enough refinement mixed with it to make it irresistible. Miss Hall was seen last year in an entirely different line of work, and her new creation stamps her as an actress of remarkable versatility. Catherine Hayes and Sabel Johnson presented their novel sketch, A Dream of Baby Days, which was reviewed when it was tried at Hurtig and Seamon's last Spring. It has been improved since then and affords ample opportunity for these two fine-looking young women to show themselves to great advantage. Miss Johnson's singing of "Colleen Bawn," with the falsetto top notes in the chorus, brought down the house, and the moving picture effect was watched with great interest. Both women were gorgeously dressed and made hits on their looks before they said a word. The Empire Comedy Four pleased those who like rough fun laid on in thick chunks. Lydia Dreams, a male ventriloquist who masquerades as a female until the act is over, and reveals his sex when making his bow, made his reappearance after a long absence in a new act called Once a Soldier Always a Soldier. Dreams carries a special setting, showing St. James' Park, London, on a Summer evening. Seated on a bench is the figure of an old veteran. Mr. Dreams comes along and engages the dummy in a ventriloquial conversation that introduces a song or two. The artist was either suffering from a very severe cold or has gone back wofully since he was last seen here, as he could scarcely be heard beyond the footlights. The turn includes a very natural bit of business in the supposed fainting of the old soldier and his revival by a London "Bobby." The hit of the act was made by a small boy, not billed, who sang a popular song very sweetly. Mathews and Ashley scored a popular hit in A Smashup in Chinatown. The Mysterious Howards, two men who do an act something like that of the Zancigs, mystified nearly everybody with their "thought reading." There is no denying that they do a very clever turn and work with remarkable celerity. At the close of their act they give a demonstration of thought-transference that is very puzzling, as no words are exchanged and the Howard on the stage writes numbers on a blackboard while blindfolded that are on bills and checks, etc., supplied by people in the audience. The Kochy Brothers, recently from Europe, did many novel and original hand-balancing stunts. Scott and Wilson opened the bill with a diverting acrobatic comedy act.

PASTOR'S.—Elmer Tenley was the headliner and the patrons seemed quite pleased with the narrat'on of his adventures on a trolley ride. The special attraction was Jack and Jill, the pretty little sketch presented by Arthur, Mildred and Stella Sowlan. The children are clever, especially in their acrobatic work. Merritt and Ireland, a new team of conversational comedians, scored a good-sized hit with patter and songs smartly arranged. Frederick Ireland, the straight man of the team, dresses in excellent taste, and made a fine appearance. He was formerly the owner and demonstrator of the automatic brings a hearty encore. Toby Claude was dainty and pleasing and Mr. and Mrs. Mark Murphy held their own with the best of them in The Coal strike, the humor of which struck home to every one present. Borani and Nevaro, clever acrobats; Mabelle Adams, a talented violinist; the Eight English Primroses, and the Fourteen Black Hussars rounded out an unusually fine programme.

COLONIAL.—Another of Manager Williams' topliner bills attracted good crowds throughout the week. John W. Ransome appeared in his impersonation of William J. Bryan, and scored with the droll stories he introduced in his monologue. The Marvelous Fays continued their success for a second week. Braatz's dogs were seen here for the first time and did some tricks that are extremely effective, showing great care in their training. It is one of the best acts of its kind ever seen here, and Mr. Braatz deserves to rank among the leaders in his profession. Sylvester, Jones, Pringle, and Morrell (That Quartette) scored a tremendous hit with their fine singing, the tenor coming in for special appreciation. Frad Karno's Speechless Comedians scored in A Night in the Slums of London, which is a lively pantomime full of good material. Al Shean and Charles Warren in Kidding Captain Kidd have one of the funniest acts they have ever shown. Leo Carillo, a comedian with an engaging manner, told some good stories, most of which concerned Chinamen. Mr. Carillo has made a special study of the Chinese character, and his delineations of the peculiarities of the Celestial are accurate and amusing. The Hacker-Lester Trio of cyclists opened the bill with good results.

HAMMERSTEIN'S VICTORIA.—Arthur Prince was the headliner and once more convulsed his hearers with his ventriloquil conversation with his dummy "Jim." Fred Niblo's rapid fire monologue was one of the best things in the bill, and it is needless to say that Josephine Cohan and company in Friday, the Thirteenth, were as popular as ever. Eva Williams and Jac Tucker made a hit of the largest possible proportions in Skinny's Return, in which Miss Williams does some of the best work of her career. The Zancigs bade farewell to America for several months, demonstrating their ability as transferrers of thought in no uncertain manner. Hoey and Lee put on an almost entirely new act, with some of the smartest parodies they have ever sung. They were encored vociferously. The Lasky-Bolte Quintette played charmingly, and the effects used were highly pleasing. The Rappo Sisters, clever dancers, and Bostow, the hand-balancer, were also in the bill.

HIPPODROME.—The gorgeous spectacle, A Society Circus, is still the attraction at this house, although preparations are under way for replacing it with something equally brilliant. Last week large crowds applauded Marcelline, the Althoffs, the Patty-Frank Troupe, Ena Bertoldi, the Uessens, the Merkel Sisters and the other artists who compose the fine programme of circus acts.

ALHAMBRA.—The Orpheum show, which has been reviewed in this column, drew splendid houses last week. The roster included Ned Wayburn's Rain-Dears, headed by Neva Aymar; Menetekel, the European illusion; Walter C. Kelly, Ed F. Reynard, the Borsini Troupe, Howard and North, in Those Were Happy Days; Wilson's monkey, Collins and Brown, and Work and Ower.

IRENE FRANKLIN.

Above is a picture of Irene Franklin, the dainty little singing comedienne, who has been playing the Western Vaudeville Association bookings for the past three months, and is credited with having made as big a hit as any single singing act that has visited the West this season. Miss Franklin is seriously considering an offer to enter musical comedy and to introduce the line of comedy work with which she has made her reputation in vaudeville.

The Burlesque Houses.

DEWEY.—The Avenue Girls made their first appearance here this season and attracted large crowds. The opening burlesque is called The Tiger Springs, and the leading parts were well played by Charles Johnson, Mike McDonald, Elsie Leslie, Mabel Lord and Phil McFarland. The olio included McFarland and McDonald, Elsie Leslie, Charles Johnson and Cunningham and Lord. The afterpiece is Get Rich and Quick. Brokers, and enlists the services of the entire company. This week, Williams's Ideals.

GOTHAM.—The Colonial Belles made their Harlem debut for this season, and the glad hand of welcome was given them in a way that showed how delighted the Harlemites were to have them in their vicinity. Hits were made by Charles Robinson, Rose Carlin, Lawrence Edwards and Marie Richmond. Charles Falke and the Great Vulcan. This week, Carr's Thoroughbreds.

MINER'S BOWERY.—The Innocent Maids, with Nat and Sol Fields as chief funmakers, drew large and well pleased audiences. This week, Wine, Women and Song.

MURRAY HILL.—The Bowery Burlesquers were made to feel quite at ease, although they had strayed a mile or two from home. The efforts of the Farrell-Taylor Trio, very clever musical comedians, were thoroughly appreciated, and the burlesques were enjoyed. This week, Fred Irwin's Majesties.

MINER'S EIGHTH AVENUE.—The Parisian Belles, under the management of John Grieves, played a successful engagement. The company includes Sheppard Camp, Reba Donaldson, Daley and O'Brien and Somers and Law. This week, Baltimore Beauties.

HARLEM MUSIC HALL.—The Trocadero Burlesquers, with West and Williams, Stirk and London, Mae Taylor, the Wilsons and the Grahams entertained fair audiences. This week, Boston Belles.

LONDON.—The Jolly Grass Widows were not allowed to feel lonesome last week, as large crowds of admirers gathered at the theatre twice

THE FIFTH AVENUE REOPENED.

One of the big events of the vaudeville season occurred last week when the Fifth Avenue Theatre was reopened under the management of Keith and Proctor. The new decorations of the house, which were fully described in last week's MIRROR, attracted much favorable comment, and General Manager E. F. Albee was personally congratulated by many of the patrons on the excellent taste displayed in the renovation of the splendid playhouse. Everything was spick and span from the dome, with its fine Tojetti panels, which are brought into splendid relief by the fine new centre chandelier, to the basement, in which the smoking and retiring rooms are located. The ushers, ticket-takers, and other employes are arrayed in gorgeous uniforms, and everything is run with military precision. The comfort of the audience is looked after with the care that characterizes all of the Keith-Proctor enterprises, and everything possible is done to make people feel at home. The importance of the occasion called for an attraction of unusual strength, and accordingly the management presented Mrs. Langtry, who made her vaudeville debut in a one-act play called Between the Nightfall and the Light, written by Graham Hill. At the opening performance Mrs. Langtry was given a welcome that was cordial in the extreme. She was compelled to remain bowing her acknowledgments for fully a minute before the play was allowed to proceed. The story of the little play is not very enlivening, and Mrs. Langtry might have chosen something more cheerful with which to make her first appeal in vaudeville. A man whose wife's affections have been stolen from him comes to the wife of the villain in the case and tries to force her to go away with him in order to be revenged on the wrecker of his happiness. She pleads for time and the angry visitor gives her twenty minutes in which to have an interview with her husband, threatening to come back and kill him if she does not keep her promise to run away with him. The guilty husband, confronted with the proof of his guilt, confesses, but he has such a winning way that with a few soft words he secures his wife's forgiveness. On a pretext of needing air after the trying interview she slips on her husband's hat and coat and steps outside. There are two shots from a revolver and she staggers back into the room to die in the arms of her worthless husband. Beyond affording Mrs. Langtry an opportunity to show a very beautiful, low-necked gown and to go through a death scene the play was of no consequence. However, the "headliner" was on view for half an hour and it did not matter much what vehicle she used. She was assisted by Arthur Holmes-Gore and Hubert Carter. The best number on the bill was that of Willard Simms and company in Mr. Simms' old skit, Flinders' Furnished Flat, in which common wall paper is shown to have laugh-making qualities of a high order. Mr. Simms is extremely amusing in this sketch and kept the house in an uproar. Lee Harrison had some good new stories, which he told with his usual confidence, and a couple of up-to-date songs. Norah Bayes, who was added to the bill on Monday evening, scored a very emphatic hit. The Royal Musical Five presented one of the neatest and most attractive musical acts seen here this season. The company is made up of one girl and four men, who carry themselves with grace and play their instruments with charm. The Sisters O'Meers, Beanah and Miller, Al Carleton, Allenel and his monkey, Three Perry Sisters, Archer and Crocker, Fitzgerald and Gilday, Hedrix and Prescott, and Al Burton completed the programme.

VAUDEVILLE NOTES FROM LONDON.

Marie Tempest has scored a great success at the Palace. She has a repertoire of thirteen songs and makes frequent changes, so that her admirers come again and again to hear her. At her opening performance she sang "Forethought" and "Speak but One Word," by Lambert; "Les Filles de Cadix," by Delibes, and "The Nightingale" song.

Albert Mason has a skit called The Would-Be Actors, which has met with great favor.

Arabella Allen is doing her share in encouraging the revival of interest in Dickens by doing a turn in which she impersonates several of his quaintest creations.

Arthur Roberts has a new sketch called The Woman Who Was, written by Harry Plem, who was in New York once upon a time, but for the present will stick to his big hit, The Importance of Being Another Man's Wife.

Fitzroy Gardner, late acting manager of the Palace, was the recipient recently of a handsomely fitted traveling bag and writing case from the Palace staff. The usual speeches were exchanged.

A firm with an eye to business, noting the number of comedy jugglers on the variety stage, advertises special prices on crockery especially made for smashing.

Ella Shields has been engaged by Robert Arthur as principal boy, for his 1907 pantomime production in London. This contract will run for three years.

Calcedo, the great wire artist, who has been uniformly successful here, has been engaged to appear at Agricultural Hall from Dec. 22 to Feb. 10.

The death of Harry Harvey, of the Harvey Boys, is the first break in the ranks of the Variety Artists' Federation. The assessment on the members amounted to £70, which was turned over to the comedian's family.

The new Hippodrome in Belfast is an assured fact. Will Sley is at the head of the syndicate of English and Irish capitalists who will finance the project. The house will seat 3,000.

Leah Laurie, a very clever character actress, has scored a hit in the Hebrew monologue, in which she has original songs, patter and bits of highly amusing business.

Lottie Collins, of "Ta-Ra-Ra-Boom-De-Ay" fame, who has been in retirement for a long time, has returned to the halls, and is enjoying renewed popularity in the provinces.

A moving picture concern showed remarkable enterprise recently by showing views of a sporting event at no less than twelve halls in the evening of the day on which the affair occurred.

William Clements, who was a fireman at the Alhambra for more than forty years, died recently at the age of seventy-three years.

Muriel Foster, the well-known vocalist, will upon her marriage to L. Goetz retire from the stage.

Colby and May, the Ventriloquist and the Dancing Doll, are reported to be making a decided hit in the Princess.

The friends of Emily Soldene will be pained to learn that she is in need of a benefit, which will take place at the Palace in November. Miss Soldene has decided to return to Australia to end her days there.

CLEVELAND HAS A NEW THEATRE.

A new vaudeville theatre was opened in Cleveland last week, at the corner of East Fifty-fifth Street and Hough Avenue. It has a seating capacity of about 400, and is devoted to vaudeville of the cheaper grade. S. R. Temple, of Cleveland, is in charge of the enterprise. The opening bill included the Bernsteins, singers and dancers; the juggling Johns, club jugglers and hoop rollers; Canfield and Mannay, sketch artists; De Friste Vogt, musical comedian; Zarelli, gymnast; the Plantation comedy quintette, and moving pictures. The prices are 10 cents for matinees and 15 and 25 cents in the evening. Sunday concerts, made up of musical acts and moving pictures, will be given.

THE TIPPING EVIL.

That American vaudeville performers are not the only ones who suffer from the greed of stage hands is proven by the action recently taken by the Variety Artists' Federation of Great Britain, which passed a resolution to the effect that they would, after Jan. 1 next, give no more tips. The Executive Committee of the V. A. F. has sent a letter to all the managers in Europe notifying them of their stand on this important question, and it is up to the managers to adjust matters by paying their stage hands decent wages, so that they will not be forced to assume the roles of beggars on Saturday nights, when the performers are practically held up and compelled to part with a percentage of their earnings. Although stage hands in American vaudeville houses are better paid than their English brethren, they all seem to have the "itching palm," and the player who forgets to apply the "oil" when his engagement is over can expect scant courtesy or worse when he fills a return date. One well-known performer who did not give the hands very much trouble with his settings told the writer that his tips averaged $8 every week, and that he only paid it for fear of the dire consequences that might follow in case he came back. As he was accustomed to play the same houses twice each season he had to make himself solid or stand a chance of having his sketch "queered." A certain popular strong man, who has a head for system, makes a practice of lining up the stage crew of the house on the closing night, and pays each man according to the amount of extra work he has done for him during the week. His secretary keeps a memorandum of the names and the amount paid, so that the athlete knows at the end of the season how much the blackmail has cost him. For those who are getting very large salaries the tipping evil is not so much of a nuisance, but there are many small-salaried acts that are not working every week, and they are "bled" as relentlessly as their more fortunate co-workers. There are several property men who average a much higher weekly income than many a clever performer, because they are "on the job" week in and week out and they see to it that nobody escapes without paying toll. An interesting phase of the situation lies in the fact that a great many vaudeville performers have been made honorary members of the T. M. A., but it is said that even this affiliation does not protect them from the obligation of tipping their fellow members of the order. The managers could put a stop to the evil in a few days if they put their feet down emphatically. There are plenty of expert stage hands at liberty, who would be perfectly willing to step into places made vacant by those who would not care to obey a rule prohibiting tips. In a majority of the theatres there is an "anti-tip" rule for the protection of patrons, and performers are entitled to even greater protection, for the average performer is not nearly as well to do as the average ticket-buyer.

PAPINTA WINS HER SUIT.

Mrs. W. J. Holpin, who is known the world over as Papinta, the dancer, has won a well deserved victory in the legal battle over the estate of her late husband. Mr. Holpin was a shrewd business man who looked after his wife's interests, seeing that her salary was always as high as could be obtained, and he invested her earnings in a stock ranch in Contra Costa County, California, where they spent their Summers and planned for the days when their financial position would warrant the retirement of Papinta from the stage, with visions of a long and rosy future of ease among the hills and dales of sunny California raising race horses for the market. After Mr. Holpin's death his relatives put in a claim, no will having been found. Mrs. Holpin charged that a will devising all of her husband's estate to herself had disappeared from a trunk at the farmhouse on the ranch between the time of her husband's death in March, 1905, and her arrival from the East. When she arrived she found the farm in possession of her father-in-law and his daughter. Both parties petitioned for letters of administration.

At the hearing before Judge Wells, in Martinez, Cal., on Sept. 29, oral proof of the making of the will and documentary evidence of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Holpin were presented. The judge gave a decision in favor of Mrs. Holpin, ruling that she is entitled to letters of administration upon the estate, and declaring her to be the lawful devisee under a will of her husband that had disappeared.

The Papinta ranch is a valuable tract of 150 acres at the base of Mount Diablo. It was bought with money earned by the dancer in vaudeville. After entering her suit and while waiting for the date set for the trial, Papinta journeyed to South Africa, where she presented her dances in Johannesburg and Cape Town. She will probably resume her appearances in her familiar specialty in the near future.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN IS PROSPERING.

The people who have been wondering for the past year or so what had become of John L. Sullivan, the ex-pugilist, will be pleased to know that he is getting along very nicely in a vaudeville sketch, and that he has had scarcely an idle week in many months. He has settled down to hard work and is encouraged by the excellent financial returns, as the ten-cent vaudeville theatres in which he plays are invariably packed when he is the headliner. Sullivan is so pleased with the appreciation of the simple Western folk that he has announced that he will never again be seen in the big cities, but will continue to entertain the "farmers," who have given him such strong support when he was supposed to have joined the "Down and Out Club."

ORPHEUM BUYS IN OAKLAND.

The Orpheum Amusement Company announced a few days ago that arrangements have been made for the purchase of Hamilton Hall, on the corner of Thirteenth and Jefferson streets, Oakland, Cal., and that this property, together with other adjoining parcels now owned by the Orpheum people, would be used for the erection of a very handsome vaudeville theatre. The Hamilton Hall property was purchased about a year ago by a man named Meyer for $29,000, and it is said that the price paid by the Orpheum Company is in excess of $55,000. The entire property controlled by the Orpheum Company gives them a frontage of 180 feet on Thirteenth Street, 113 feet on Jefferson Street, and 80 feet on Twelfth Street. No announcement concerning the building plans has been made.

MAIN'S WINTER QUARTERS BURNED.

Almost the entire equipment of the Cummins' Wild West Show, owned by Walter L. Main, was consumed by a fire which destroyed the Winter quarters at Geneva, O., on Tuesday morning, Oct. 2. Two employes, who were evidently engaged in trying to release some of the animals, were found after the fire, burned beyond recognition. Twenty-four horses and a number of wild animals were burned, besides a lot of paraphernalia, the total loss amounting to about $50,000. The insurance was only $6,000. The alarm was given by Powers' elephants, which trumpeted loudly, and were released by the keepers in time for them to make their escape from the flames. The fire was probably caused by a lighted cigarette stump tossed aside by a careless employe.

NORAH BAYES' BIRTHDAY.

On Friday evening last, at the Hotel Astor, Norah Bayes entertained several of her friends at supper. The occasion was the birthday of the hostess, who is young enough not to be annoyed by any quips concerning her age. The party was very enthusiastic and the health of the hostess was drunk in many steins of the beverage that she has made famous through her singing of a song in praise of its merits, and in glasses of a more exhilarating beverage. Miss Bayes was the recipient of many compliments upon her success in brightening up the bill at the Fifth Avenue Theatre last week.

K. AND P. MAY BUY MONTAUK.

The many rumors concerning the desire of Keith and Proctor to secure a house in Brooklyn took definite shape last week when Ex-Senator William H. Reynolds, one of the chief stockholders of the Hanover Amusement Company, which owns the new Montauk Theatre in Brooklyn, stated in an interview that he had been asked by a representative of Keith and Proctor to name a price at which the house would be sold. He named the price, said to be about $600,000, which is $100,000 in excess of what the building and ground cost. The Keith-Proctor people are considering the matter, and if they decide to buy the theatre it will be remodeled during the Summer and opened next Fall as a home for vaudeville. Mr. Reynolds stated that if the deal went through his company would immediately begin the erection of another new house for high-class legitimate attractions to take the place of the Montauk. A strange feature of the transaction is that Percy G. Williams, manager of the Orpheum, is a stockholder in the Hanover Company, and he says he is perfectly willing that the house shall be sold, even if it brings an opposition vaudeville theatre within three or four blocks of his Orpheum, which has been a veritable gold mine for the past seven years.

AN ODD BOX-PARTY.

At the opening of the Fifth Avenue Theatre on Monday afternoon of last week those who know the faces of the "big guns" in vaudeville were more than astonished to see in the center box in the balcony B. F. Keith, William Morris and Percy G. Williams all in a row watching the work of Mrs. Langtry and the other vaudevillians who made up the programme. It appears that Messrs. Williams and Morris dropped in in a quiet way, taking the usual box office route, to look over the house and the bill. They were present early and the usher gave them the best seats in the house, as the rule is "first come first served." Mr. Keith was on hand in due time, and he also got a preferred position that placed him between Mr. Williams and Mr. Morris. They all seemed to be making the best of what was more or less an embarrassing position. Alan Dale, who writes humorous stories of theatrical productions, was also in the box with the vaudeville magnates, but he did not seem to realize that an interesting little drama in real life was going on directly behind him.

NEW STAR IN TORONTO.

F. W. Stair, manager of the Star Theatre, Toronto, who announced some time ago that he intended to build a new house on Queen Street, in that city, has changed his plans, and instead has bought a plot of ground, sixty-five feet wide, between his present house and the Telephone Building on Temperance Street, and will shortly after Jan. 1 begin to build a new theatre on the property. The stage will be built at the west end, and the theatre will be turned around so that the audience will face the west instead of the south as at present. Mr. Stair plans to build the stage and part of the auditorium during the Spring, and after the close of the season the inside of the old house will be torn out and remodeled to connect with the new section. When the whole building is completed it will be practically a new theatre, with a capacity of 2,000. The architect of the house is T. Teller, of Toronto, and associated with him will be J. B. McElfatrick and Sons, of New York.

COL. CODY HOME AGAIN.

Col. William F. Cody, better known as Buffalo Bill, arrived in New York last week from Europe on the Zeeland. With him were Major John M. Burke, sixty Sioux Indians and eight cowboys. Colonel Cody left almost immediately for his home in Cody, Wyo.; the Indians started for their reservation in Dakota and Major Burke went to Bridgeport, Conn. In a chat about his enterprise, Colonel Cody said that the Wild West had visited seventeen countries and had played in every big city and in every town of any consequence. The members of the company who were unable to obtain passage owing to the homeward rush from Europe at this time, will come over later and will scatter to their homes in various sections of the United States. In March next they will all be gathered together for rehearsals preparatory to the opening of the American tour, which will begin at Madison Square Garden in April.

FRED RAY A BENEDICT.

Fred Ray, the well-known vaudeville comedian, who has won his way to a high place in the profession by his extremely clever and original travesties on the classic drama, was married on Monday evening, Oct. 1, to Lillian Reed, a non-professional. The ceremony was performed in Toronto, Canada, at the residence of the bride, who is the daughter of one of the wealthiest lumber merchants in Toronto. The romance that had such a happy termination began three Summers ago during a trip to Europe on the steamship Carpathia. When the news reaches his friends through THE MIRROR Mr. Ray will undoubtedly be showered with congratulations. He has always been looked upon as a confirmed bachelor and his marriage will cause great surprise in vaudeville circles. At the end of the season Mr. Ray expects to retire from the stage and will take up a business career.

A NOVEL PROTEAN SKETCH.

Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Crane produced their new comedy, Everybody's Up, last week at Keith's, Providence. The story was devised by Mr. and Mrs. Crane, and the playlet was put together by Edmund Day. The plot deals with a rich woman who is a guest at a Summer hotel. She has lost a valuable diamond necklace, and having no idea who the thief is insists that all the guests of the hotel, although the time is midnight, be searched. It is a protean play, as Mr. and Mrs. Crane each play six characters, all different in make-up and dialect. Mrs. Crane plays a scrubwoman, a German woman, a chambermaid, a corset agent, a French maid, and a laundress, and Mr. Crane appears as a bellboy, a Westerner, an Austrian count, and in three other characters. The company includes L. F. Rinehart, Vera Rial, and Louis Prohoff, and a special setting is carried.

NEW HOUSE IN SHEBOYGAN.

The new Unique Theatre at Sheboygan, Wis., under the management and ownership of Arthur Lane, opened Oct. 1 to standing room only and enormous business continued throughout the week. Following was the bill, booked through the Western Vaudeville Managers' Association, who have the exclusive booking: Louie Dacre and Candy Boy, Harry Spingold and company, Harris, Beaugard and Harris, Billy Durant, Bennington Brothers, and Guy's Parlor Minstrels. The Unique is a perfectly equipped, modern theatre, seating 1,000, and the prices are 10, 15 and 25 cents. It has two balconies and reserved loges, a woman's retiring room, with maid in attendance, and a nursery, where babies may be checked and cared for during the performance. All the house employes wear a neat uniform and the members of the orchestra appear in evening dress.

VION BACK ON BROADWAY.

Joseph F. Vion, the most genial agent that ever handled business for a client, is back on Broadway again after an experience of a year or two as a suburban real estate agent. Mr. Vion was responsible for bringing the Four Cohans into prominence, compelling managers to recognize their value, and also promoted the interests of several other performers who were more or less obscure when he took hold of them and who are now earning large salaries. He intends to become the personal representative of a limited number of first-class acts, and will devote his time to seeing that their date books are kept filled.

GILBERT SHORTER.

Gilbert Shorter, whose picture appears above, is an English entertainer, who arrived in New York a few days ago to spend the season here, giving dramatic readings. For several years he has been before the British public, and has entertained many notables at their homes, including members of the royal family. A special performance given by him at His Majesty's Theatre was under royal patronage, and a series of recitals at Steinway Hall, London, last season, attracted audiences notable for their size and quality. Mr. Shorter may possibly appear in vaudeville for a short time in a one-act play called The Maelstrom, written by Ida Mansfield Wilson, in which he is assisted by Little Beryl, who is said to be one of the cleverest child actresses in England. Mr. Shorter is prepared to give a whole evening's entertainment, having a very large repertoire. Lillian Adams, a gifted pianist and composer, accompanies Mr. Shorter with incidental music, and also contributes piano solos, which, judging from notices of her work in the leading London papers, are above the ordinary. Mr. Shorter has achieved some prominence as a writer, and during his tour will act as special correspondent for the London Era and the Freemason. He will also take notes for the purpose of writing a book on his travels, paying especial attention to Chicago. After a short stay in New York he will start in a long tour of the principal cities of Canada, for which bookings have already been made.

TOD SLOAN IN ENGLAND.

Tod Sloan, the ex-jockey, who appeared at Hammerstein's for one week last season in a monologue, has made arrangements to open at the Empire Theatre, Liverpool, England, on Nov. 12, in a sketch dealing with racing life, called A Jockey's Honor, written for him by Sydney Mason. It is evident that the act has met with approval of the managers, as Mr. Sloan has been booked for twenty-seven weeks over the Moss Tour. His company will include Pedlar Palmer and Ernie Plummer, who have earned distinction in lines quite removed from the theatre. One of the features of the act will be a real race in which Sloan will ride a genuine horse. A sensational episode is a scene founded upon an actual occurrence in Sloan's life, and this is expected to create a sensation.

NEW COMPANY INCORPORATED.

The Biondi Panoramic and Amusement Company of New York was incorporated in Albany on Thursday last, with a capital of $300,000. The directors are Michael Santangelo, Angelo F. Biondi, and Germano Biondi, all of New York. The company has been organized for the purpose of exploiting an invention of Anselo F. Biondi, an Italian druggist, who keeps a store on the East Side of New York. Mr. Biondi is convinced that he has perfected a device that will coin money and eclipse anything ever shown at Coney Island or any other resort. It is in the nature of a train that stands still, while miles of panoramic scenery rush by the windows at a high rate of speed. If Mr. Biondi's invention works as well as he expects it will, the moving picture "tours" will have to take a back seat.

MADE THROUGH ACTORS' SOCIETY.

The Actors' Society does not confine itself to the work of securing engagements for its members in regular companies, but looks after the interests of vaudeville stars who are seeking competent players for their support. Many good engagements have been secured by the society in the past, and during the past few weeks the secretary has been particularly busy in this special line. Among the engagements made since Sept. 1 are Evelyn Clark, with Edgar Allen; J. Griffith Wray and William Gerrald, with Violet Black; Claire Washington, Harold Cheshire, and Bert Merket, with Gracie Emmett; Harry Keane, with John J. Kelly; Joseph P. Cleary, with Edward Esmonde; Otto Hoffman, Eugene Webber, and George Holt, with Fred Niblo and Josephine Cohan; Lottie Meeny, with Horsky and Bergere, and Sara Lewis, with Irwin and Leuscher.

RATS' NEW MEETING DAY.

At a regular meeting of the White Rats of America, held in their rooms in the Hotel Sarsanac, on Sunday evening last, a resolution was passed changing the time for regular meetings from Sunday to Thursday evenings at 11 o'clock. It was decided after a short discussion that the new arrangement would suit the majority of the members better than the old one. Major Burk, the secretary of the order, says that the membership is increasing by leaps and bounds, and that it will not be many months before the organization will be as strong numerically as it was in the beginning. The meetings are well attended and the members are taking the liveliest interest in all matters concerning the welfare of the society.

LA BELLE DAZIE SAILS.

La Belle Dazie, who has won fame and fortune as Le Domino Rouge, and who recently finished a highly successful engagement at the London Palace, sailed for New York on Wednesday last. She is booked for her farewell appearances in vaudeville at the Orpheum in Brooklyn and Albaugh's in Baltimore. After these engagements have been filled vaudeville will know the little artist no more, as she will immediately begin rehearsals with the Hammerstein Opera company as principal dancer. Mark Luescher, who looks after her affairs, has arranged a series of special matinees, which will take place during the season at a prominent theatre at which Mlle. Dazie will show some new figures that she has been studying for several months.

BISTES AT ST. PAUL ORPHEUM

Jules F. Bistes, who has been resident manager of the Orpheum in Salt Lake City since it was opened, has been promoted to the position of resident manager of the new Orpheum, at Fifth and St. Peter streets, St. Paul, Minn., which is now nearing completion. Mr. Bistes has already arrived in St. Paul to prepare for the opening which it is expected will occur on Oct. 29.

CLARA THROPP HAS A SKETCH.

Clara Thropp, whose performance of Taggs in The County Fair is still pleasantly remembered, has secured a vehicle for vaudeville that she feels certain will meet with favor. It is a sketch called A Night at the Café, and was written especially for Miss Thropp by Edmund Day, whose reputation as a "sketchwright" is firmly established. Miss Thropp's character allows for the introduction of a specialty or two and a lot of original business. She will be assisted by Harry Blakemore, who has had experience in a wide range of parts. The sketch will be seen on the Keith-Proctor circuit in the near future.

SPENSER KELLY'S NEW ACT.

Spenser Kelly, the well-known baritone, whose single specialty was always a welcome number on any vaudeville programme, has decided to appear this season in a comedy sketch with good singing as the feature. He will have in his support Bertha Wood, Trixie Manhill, and Thomas C. Wright. The act is entitled An Evening at Home and was written by Mr. Kelly himself. The company is booked to open at Passaic, N. J., on Oct. 15, with Poughkeepsie to follow. These dates have been booked simply to break in the act and take off any rough edges that may appear before it is presented at the more important theatres.

DAVENPORT TO REAPPEAR.

Ira E. Davenport, of the once famous Davenport Brothers, who made a fortune many years ago with an act similar to that of the Fays, and who has been living in retirement in Mayville, N. Y., since the death of his brother in Australia in 1877, left Mayville Sept. 19 and sailed for Europe Sept. 29, intending to make a tour of the world. Mr. Davenport has made preparations to reappear on the stage, and will revive the exhibitions given by himself and his brother, with a few new tricks he has invented during his long rest of twenty-nine years.

BRANSBY WILLIAMS HONORED.

Bransby Williams, the English character actor who has met with success in the delineation of characters from the works of Charles Dickens, has been requested by the Board of Education of New York to give public performances in the schools for the benefit of the scholars. Mr. Williams is booked at the Colonial and Alhambra, and if arrangements can be made with the management of these theatres to permit the performances, Mr. Williams has expressed his willingness to comply with the request.

NEW HOUSE IN RUTLAND.

Felix Blei, who was at one time prominent in New York theatrical circles, has leased the Armory of Company A, Vermont National Guard, in Rutland, Vt., and has taken steps toward having the building made over into a vaudeville theatre, with a capacity of 1,000. Mr. Blei has houses in Mechanicsville and Ticonderoga, N. Y., and Bennington, Bellows Falls, Fair Haven, Ludlow and Bristol, Vt., and the house in Rutland will be added to the circuit as soon as it is ready, which will be about Oct. 15.

SELDEN JOINS SHAPIRO.

Edgar Selden is being congratulated on all sides upon the announcement of his association with Maurice Shapiro in the conduct of the affairs of his new music publishing concern, which will begin operations Dec. 1, and for which, on behalf of Mr. Shapiro, Mr. Selden successfully negotiated a long term lease of the large first floor at 1416 Broadway, corner of Thirty-ninth Street, where business propositions of every nature will be welcomed and considered.

WILLIAMS—WARNER.

Harry Williams (Mandel), of the sketch team Williams and Dawson, with the New York Stars burlesque company, was married at Albany, N. Y., on Friday last to Lorella Warner, a member of the same company who is appearing as one of the eight "Parisian Ponies." Despite the fact that it was Friday, the young couple defied the usual superstition. Justice Scott performed the ceremony.

PLAYERS POISONED.

While Harry Corson Clarke and Fanny Rice were playing at Worcester, Mass., a few days ago, they were taken violently ill. The physicians diagnosed their cases as ptomaine poisoning, and applied heroic treatment that resulted in the complete recovery of the players. The victims blame their illness on some canned chicken that both ate in Springfield, Mass.

VAUDEVILLE JOTTINGS.

Leon and Bertie Allen are in their sixth week with The King of Tramps. Mr. Allen is managing the co. and playing the juvenile role, and Miss Allen is doing a soubrette part. They also introduce their specialty very successfully. Charles Glenroy, a brother of Miss Allen, joined the co. Sept. 10 at Hot Springs, Ark., as trap drummer. The season so far has been very profitable.

Billy Carter, the veteran minstrel who is still able to make audiences laugh, will be seventy-two years old in December.

Josephine Sabel has been re-engaged for another month at the Olympia, Paris, where she has made a deep impression singing songs in French and English.

Manager Percy G. Williams announces that he has engaged the Hungarian violinist, Koclan, to open at the Colonial early in November.

Antonio Mayer, of 207 Second Avenue, New York, has imported from Germany what he calls a "vocal graphbioscope" machine, producing moving pictures simultaneously with phonographic singing and speaking, all operated from a central keyboard. This idea has had a peculiar fascination for picture and talking-machine people in the past, but their efforts have never hitherto produced practical results, the necessary delicate adjustment of parts being more than they could overcome. The present machine, however, is said to be perfect in its operation, and if it should prove as successful as it is claimed to be, it cannot fail to command the attention of all vaudeville and amusement managers.

The Barnum and Bailey Circus has suffered serious losses during the past two weeks in the South, owing to the many storms and floods in that part of the country. No performances were given in Clarksdale, Vicksburg or Greenville, and it is probable that the organization will close a few days earlier than was intended, owing to the damage done by the elements.

Ned Wayburn has decided to replace Taylor Granville with Kingsley Benedict in The Futurity Winner, beginning October 15. Mr. Granville will make his final appearance as the jockey on Saturday evening.

O'Hana San, the Japanese impressario, will put on a new act, called The Geisha's Dream at Keeney's, Brooklyn, October 22. The scenery and accessories were all imported from Japan. Joseph Hart is managing Mr. San's business affairs.

The Union Theater, formerly the Circle, at Broadway and Sixtieth Street is approaching completion, and it is expected that the opening will occur October 22, with Wine, Women and Song.

AMONG THE MUSIC PUBLISHERS.

A real novelty in popular songs can always be depended on to force its way quickly to the front, and it is so with "The Bullfrog and the Coon" song by Feist and Nathan. The title alone would attract attention, but the song is even better than the title, and the result is a big demand from farce comedy companies and vaudeville artists for professional copies. The song is already being successfully featured in numerous companies.

Among the songs sung by Anna Held in The Parisian Model was one which it is predicted will be greater than "Won't You Come and Play With Me?" The new number is entitled "I Just Can't Make My Eyes Behave," published by the Gus Edwards Music Pub. Co.

Charles K. Harris, who never fails to produce a great child song at this season of the year, is just out with one which should prove one of his best and that is saying much. The new number, entitled "And a Little Child Shall Lead Them," is the touching story of how a little girl reunited her separated parents, and is in Mr. Harris's best vein. Professional copies are ready.

"How'd You Like to Like a Girl Like Me?" and "Moving Time" are among the feature numbers with the Florence Bindley attraction, taking from five to twelve encores nightly.

One of Stern and Company's latest songs, "The Bird on Nellie's Hat," as sung by Eddie Foy, is meeting with great success. The catch line, "You don't know Nellie like I do," conveys a world of meaning.

William Frederick Peters, composer of Richard Carle's Mayor of Tokio, has taken charge of the professional department of the Victor Kremer Music Publishing house in Chicago, and professional friends are invited to call.

A new waltz song, "Give Me an American Girl," published by A. D. Magee, of Allegheny, Pa., is meeting with success.

Ray W. Conner, formerly in charge of the orchestra department of Helf and Hager, but now with the New York Music Publishing House, has written an intermezzo entitled "Ninita," which is proving remarkably successful, having been taken up by a number of prominent musical acts.

"Arrah-Wanna," published by the Haviland Company, is a novelty song that is attracting attention. John F. Clarke, Carney and Wagner, Homer and Potter, the Elite Four, Tom Gillen and others have added it to their repertoire.

The Harmony Music Company has moved to new quarters, 51 West Twenty-eighth Street, the location made famous by more than one prominent publishing house that has been compelled to seek more extensive accommodations.

"The Cannon Ball," an instrumental number by Jos. Northrup, and "Cinderella," an intermezzo by W. C. Polla, are among the new publications by the Victor Kremer Company.

George Sidney's Busy Izzy Company is scoring heavily with Feist and Nathan's novelty sextette, "How'd You Like to Like a Girl Like Me?"

"Kiss All the Girls for Me," a new novelty song published by Stern and Company, is an attractive number being featured by a number of prominent artists.

Bobby Harris and Roscoe Trozier will take Twirly-Whirly through the South and the route is now being booked. Melville Morris and Jack T. Harris, of the Morris-Harris Music Publishing Company, will accompany the tour, the former as assistant musical director and the latter as business manager.

The Willis Woodward Company has just published a new song by Sam Lewis and Dave Rose entitled "We'll Be Sweethearts to the End," and it has sprung into instant demand, being one of those songs that appeal to the heart. Another song by the same writers, "Say You're Coming Home, Louise," is now in the press and seems to possess the elements of success. The story is that of a young man appealing to his sister to return to the old home to gladden the declining years of their aged father.

P. J. Hawley has just issued new songs as follows: "The Heart of the Rose," "Good Night, My Love, Good Night," and "The Joy of an Irish Dance," all are being sung by Andrew Mack in Arrah-Na-Pogue.

THE SONG TO MAKE A RECORD.
"IS THERE A CORNER IN HEAVEN FOR ME?"
By America's Sweetest Song-Writer.

VAUDEVILLE CORRESPONDENCE.

CHICAGO, ILL.—At the Majestic this week: Virginia Earl and her Johnnies, Colonel Bordeverry, Empire City Quartette, Lina Pantzer, Felix, Barry and Barry, the Musical Avolos, Mazus and Mazette, and Argyra Kastron.——Olympic: Rose Coghlan, Dillon Brothers, Patty Brothers, Kita Bansi Japs, Bimm, Bomm, Brrr, Maud Rockwell, Trovollo, Early and Late, Joe Golden, Donnelly and West, the Owsos, and Campbell and Brady.——Haymarket: Amelia Summerville, Boram, Klein, Ott Brothers and Nickerson, Charles Semon, Bellclair Brothers, Majestic Trio, Gartelle Brothers, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Hunn, Nellie Revere, Brandt and Larano, Marie Karl, and George E. Austin.——White City: Corn Carnival.——Folly: High School Girls.——Empson's: Rose Hill Folly co.——Trocadero: Jersey Lillies.——Items: Riverview Park closed last night the most successful season in its history.—White City visitors liked Carl Bunge's Band, which was a deserved compliment to a veteran local bandmaster. This week a new band (Thivan's) succeeds Bunge. OTIS COLBURN.

BOSTON, MASS.—Bransby Williams is the chief novelty at the Orpheum this week, making his first appearance in Boston. The other features are Fox and Clarke, Vinie Daly, Woodward's seals, Four Lukens, Orpheus Comedy Four, Julius Tannen, Elite Musical Four, and Nettie Vesta.——Keith's has another strong bill with Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Crane and co., dividing honors with Morris Cronin and the Elinore Sisters. The other features are Wylie's Circus, Fields and Ward, the Village Choir, Princess Trixie, Charles Barry and Hulda Halvers, Fred and Pauly, Mabel Sinclair, Gertrude Gebest, Pucella and Orben, the Burkes, and Archer and Crocker.——With the burlesque co. at the Howard Athenaeum are the Fitzgibbon-McCoy Trio, Golden Gate Five, Crane Brothers, Messenger Boys' Trio, Abdallah Brothers, Kelly and Adams, Bessie and Will H. Stanley, the Barthelmes, Steddon and Herson, Ferranti, and Butler Haviland.——The Gay Morning Glories co. is the attraction at the Lyceum, with The Three Admirals and A Night in Japan as the chief features.——In the olio with The London Gaiety Girls at the Columbia are Margie Catlin, Rene Washburn and Belle Austin, Oscar Lewis and Sam Green, the Musical Bells, and Pat White.——Sam A. Scribner's Gay Masqueraders are at the Palace, with the Watermelon Trust, James and Lucie Cooper, Curtin and Blossom, Lena La Couvier, and Charles Farrell.——Straight vaudeville is given at Austin and Stone's by Majone, the Mitchells, and Phil and Carrie Rasell, while the Minstrel Maids continue with new programme.——Theatre Comique has many moving pictures as well as Thomas Bullock, Frank Cohan, Harry Mason, Charles M. Fowler, Lillian Morrell, Grace Mordaunt, Beatrice Fisher, H. J. Law, Helen Quaker, Elsie Hawkins, and Alice Freeman.——Item: There is a sequel to the season at Paragon Park, and the creditors had a meeting last week and appointed a committee to look after affairs. There are some $55,000 of liabilities outstanding and $6,000 assets.
JAY BENTON.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Keith's New Theatre 8-13 presents Fred Walton in Chevy's Dream, Julia Redmond and co., the Gems, Elmer Penley, the Adelmanns, Besnah and Miller, Clayton White and Marie Stuart, the Bakers, Dave Nowlin, Maybelle Meeker, Arlington Comedy Four, Guertin and Lamb, Horace Wright, and Cliff Bernac's Circus. The patronage here always the same to capacity.——Trocadero: The Jolly Grass Widows with many novelties, headed by the Zarros Trio, is a good card.——Casino: The Bowery Burlesquers are welcome favorites. This house is doing splendidly this season. Irwin's Majestics 15.——Bijou: Merry Burlesquers, with Phil Ott. Teddy Simonds, and a new musical comedy, The Mummy Girl. Wine, Woman and Song 15.——Lyceum: Parisian Widows, with many favorites. Business always good. Greater New York Stars 15.——Nothing doing at the Bon Ton, which is controlled by Mrs. John G. Jermon.——Arch Street Museum: Lillian Waltone and co., Tom Mack, Sharpley and Flynn, Halen and Lee, and Zamma.
S. FERNBERGER.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Keith's (Charles Lovenberg, mgr.): Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Crane were the features 1-6 in the bright sketch, Everybody's Up. Selbini and Grovini, Mr. and Mrs. Adelmann, Cliff Gordon, Fills-Nowlan Trio, Cooper and Robinson, Rialto, Orth and Fern, Frederick and his pony Nessen, Hunter and Nessen, Harry Better and co., Pucella and Orden, and Gertrude Gebest also pleased. Very large houses.——Westminster (George H. Batchelder, mgr.): The Gay Morning Glories pleased with a good bill 1-6. Good business. Trocaderos 8-13.——Imperial (Leon H. Curtin, mgr.): Pat White and The London Gaiety Girls scored heavily 1-6. Rialto Rounders 8-13.——Items: Harry Martell and James H. Curtin were in town 4, on a tour inspection. They expressed themselves as pleased with the city and the manner in which the Imperial is conducted. This speaks well for local manager Leon H. Curtin. Amateur night at the Imperial has become very popular. HOWARD C. RIPLEY.

ALBANY, N. Y.—Proctor's (Howard Graham, res. mgr.): Large audiences saw a pleasing bill comprising the Steeds, Jules and Ella Garrison, Monroe, Mack and Lawrence, Diamond and Smith, Julian Rose, John and Mae Burke, Kenny and Hollis, and Conn and Conrad.——Gaiety (Mrs. Agnes Barry, prop.): Clark's Thoroughbreds Sept. 27-29 drew nicely. Miss New York, Jr., 1-3; had good houses. Washington Society Girls 4-6. Innocent Maids 8-10.——Empire (Thomas F. Henry, res. mgr.): Parisian Widows 27-29, and Gay Masqueraders 1-3, presented good performances to crowded houses. Bryant's Extravaganza 8-10. High Rollers 11-13.
GEORGE W. HERRICK.

CINCINNATI, O.—The Olympic for week Sept. 30 had John T. Kelly and co., Edna Aug, Barney Fagan and Henrietta Byron, Al. Weston and co., the Barbar-Richie Trio, Green Brothers, Bell Trio, Walters and Prouty, and Jewell's Manikins.——The Columbia had Virginia Earl and her Johnnies, Austin Walsh, Felix and Barry, the Quaker City Quartette, Paul Barnes, Patty Brothers, Argyro Kastron, Dan Burke and co., and the Kauffmann Troupe.——People's had Miner's American Burlesquers to good business.——At the Standard Mack's World Beaters pleased big house. H. A. SUTTON.

JERSEY CITY, N. J.——Bon Ton (Thomas W. Dinkins, mgr.): Wine, Woman and Song opened to capacity 1, and has turned people away at every performance. New Century Girls 8-13.——The new Keith-Proctor house is approaching completion, but will not open before 29. Manager Frank Burns is "on the job" all the time. He took THE MIRROR correspondent through the house 3, and explained all the changes made, which account for the delayed opening. It will be a handsome house with all the latest improvements.
WALTER C. SMITH.

DENVER, COL.—Orpheum: An excellent bill drew big houses Sept. 24-29. Mary Norman, James Thornton, and Bresina were favorites. May Boley and co., Mayme Remington, Theresa Rena, Arthur Deming, Linden Beckwith, Lorimer Johnstone and Caroline Cooke, Tom Armstrong, and Ella Verne 1-6.——Novelty (H. Lubelski, mgr.): Louise Hutchinson and co., the Mozleys, Sunetaros, the Taggarts, Peerless Quartette, Joe Buckley, Wilson and Leicester.——Crystal (G. Ira Adams, mgr.): The F. Maltese co., Alsola, Randolph Askeland, etc.
MARY ALKIRE BELL.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—Grand (Harry Davis, mgr.): Many people were turned away last week, at nearly every performance, who were eager to see Houdini, the Handcuff King, perform his baffling tricks. Consequently, he has been re-engaged for this week, 8-13, being the headliner of the following bill: Lebrun Grand Opera co., Gillet's dogs and baboons, Julian Rose, Nichols Sisters, Lee Tung Foo, Carter and Waters co., Lew Hawkins, Three Donals, Cunningham and Smith, Juliet Winston, Lester and Quinn, and Chelito. ALBERT S. L. HEWES.

TOLEDO, O.—The Valentine bill for Sept. 30-6 was only of ordinary strength. The best number was the Hungarian Boys' Band. McCrea and Poole, Clifford and Burke, Carter and Walters, Tre Denick and May, John Gilbert, and the Marzenas and Nevarro were also present.——At the Arcade Charlotte Townsend and co. in In Honor Bound, Helene Gerard, Madge Maitland, the Sharplies, Kennedy and Quatrelli, and Al. Lawrence made up the bill.——At the Empire Sheridan's City Sports, with Battling Nelson as an extra card, put in a good week. C. M. EDSON.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—An excellent bill at the Orpheum Sept. 30-6 drew capacity audiences. Nita Allen and co., Burton and Brooks, Eddie Clark, and the Winning Widows, McWaters-Tyson co., Bernice and Boy, Ziska and King, and Carter and Bluford pleased.——The Bohemian Burlesquers, with Joe Gans, played to big business at the Century 30-6.——The Night Owls at the Majestic were well received by big audiences. Robie's Knickerbockers 7-13.
D. KEEDY CAMPBELL.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Grand (Shafer Ziegler, mgr.): Adelaide Herrmann, Henry Lee, Apollo Quartette, Tyce and Jermon, Hines and Remington, Caron and Herbert, and Bennings, Lewis and Hennings 1-6. Business good.——Empire (Charles Zimmerman, mgr.): Brigadiers 1-6. Jolly Girls 8.——Gayety: Rice and Barton's co. 1-3. Dainty Duchess 4-6.
PEARL KIRKWOOD.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Orpheum (G. E. Raymond, mgr.): Globe of Death, Collins and Hart, Gardner and Maddern, Basque Quartette, Wilson Brothers, Reiff Brothers, and Musical Forests 1-6. Business good.——Unique: The Great Albini, Tulsa, Rentfrow and Jansen.——Dewey: The Cherry Blossoms attracted good business week of 30-6.
CHARLES M. LANE.

TORONTO, ONT.—Shea's (M. Shea, mgr.): Walter Jones and Mabel Hite scored decidedly 1-6, Miss Hite revealing unexpected comedy gifts. The Crickets, Will Rogers, Tom Moore, Sam Elton, Fred Ray and co., and the Lavine-Cimaron Trio made up the bill.——Star (F. W. Stair, mgr.): Broadway Gaiety Girls kept the audiences in good humor 1-6.
J. ALEXANDER McNEIL.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The bill at Chase's 8-13 presents The Orpheum Show, with Menetekel, Claude and Fanny Usher, Walter C. Kelcy, Work and Ower, Four Nightons, the Rain-Dears, and Wilson's monkey.——The New Lyceum offers the Fay Foster co., followed 15 by The Twentieth Century Maids.
JOHN T. WARDE.

CLEVELAND, O.—Keith's Prospect bill for week 8-13, includes The Crickets, Count Debutz and Brother, Mareena, Nevarro and Mareena, Ray Cox, and Sharp Brothers.——Rice and Barton's Big Gaiety co. is at the Empire.——Miner's Americans are at the Star.——The Lyric Theatre has another big bill of vaudeville. WILLIAM CRASTON.

OMAHA, NEB.—As usual, the Creighton Orpheum opened to a packed house Sept. 30. Bill for week being: Lucanta Trio, Hickman Brothers, Wilfred Clarke and co., Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Kemp, Lillian Apel, Billy Van, and the Camille Comedy Trio.——At the Bijou the Boston Star Specialty co. is doing well. J. R. RINGWALT.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—Orpheum (Clarence Drown, mgr.): The Italian Trio, O. T. Fiske and Nellie McDonough, Minnie Kaufman, Chink, Ben Welch, the Salvaggis, and Dixon Brothers pleased Sept. 23-30. DON W. CARLTON.

HARTFORD, CONN.—Poli's (S. Z. Poli, prop.; Louis Kilby, mgr.): Usual packed houses 1-6, saw William Rock and co., Baker Troupe, Tanner and Gilbert, Zena Keite, Emmet Devoy and co., Misses Delmore, and William and co. A. DUMONT.

PEORIA, ILL.—Main Street (Davis and Churchill, mgrs.; Frank B. Weston, res. mgr.): This is the first house to present first-class vaudeville to Peorians, and they have been packing the house at every performance. Bill week of Sept. 24-30: Myles McCarthy and co. in The Race Taut's Dream, Avon Comedy Four, Pekin Zouaves, Wells and Sells, Grace Amond, Polly and Ethel Hasel, and Berry and Berry. Zouaves are special favorites, but everything good. Extra good bill week of 1-8, includes Mr. and Mrs. Kelcey, Rader Brothers and Four Sunbeams, Bimm, Bomm, Brrr, McIntyre and Bennett, Woods and Woods, Ethel Kirkpatrick, and the Langdons.——Star (Davis and Churchill, mgrs.; George F. Bird, res. mgr.): This South Side house has become extremely popular. Lizzie Weller, Peter J. Smith, Williams and Mayer, Harry Harvey, and Raf and Custck 24-30. Opal Padgitt, Della and Verna Earl, Peter J. Smith, Musical Adams, James W. Thompson, and Raimund and Good 1-6.——Weast (C. F. Bartson, mgr.): Pauline De Vere, Gilman and Carroll, Fox and Fox, Raimund and Good, and Gene Rogers. Pleased big houses 24-30. Dalgren Sisters, Ben Turpin, McKinnon and Reed, the Rinaldos, and Gene Rogers scored 1-6.——Jacobs' (A. F. Jacobs, mgr.): Walker and Kernell, the Gales, and the Marrows 24-30. Business large. The Raymonds, the Parkers, and Wells and De Leon 1-6.——Items: Local Elks were guests of Mr. Churchill and Mr. Weston, manager of Main Street, 25. Interior of house was decorated with Elks' colors, and the occasion was a memorable one.——F. H. Livingstone, of Livingstone Stock co., who is also connected with the Davis-Churchill circuit, has left for New York.——E. C. Burroughs, general manager of Davis-Churchill circuit, was in the city recently and reports excellent business at all their houses.——Elks' held open house in honor of Main Street Theatre employes 28, a return courtesy for their entertainment 25.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Cook Opera House (J. H. Moore, mgr.; W. B. McCallum, res. mgr.): Business to the limit week 1-6. Bill: Six Musical Cuttys, Willie Zimmerman, O'Brien and Havel, Meredith Sisters, Watson's Farmyard, Mlle. Nadji, and Hawthorne and Burt. Week 8-13: Charles E. Evans and co., James J. Morton, Ed Reynard, J. K. Murray and Clara Lane, Marsella and Millay, and the Holdsworths.——Corinthian (H. C. Jacobs, mgr.; Fred C. Strauss, res. mgr.): Harry Bryant's Burlesquers to large houses 1-6. Al. Reeves 8-13.

BAYONNE, N. J.—Park (E. A. Schiller, mgr.): The Andres closed the Summer season Sept. 29 to fair attendance. Alvin and Kenny, the Musical Harts, Emily Nice, and Kin-ka-kugi and Usaki were pleasing.——Item: Manager E. A. Schiller, who has become sole manager of the new Bayonne Theatre, has announced that the new playhouse will open Thursday evening, 25, with Cheridah Simpson in Red Feather. The tickets for the opening performance are to be sold at auction.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—Family (Victor D. Levitt, gen. mgr.; E. B. Sweet, res. mgr.): Bill week of Sept. 24-29 included Sienna Attantica, Frank Martin, Charles Buckley and co., Richard Brothers, Esterbrooks, Lew Ward, and Miller and Hunter to big houses. Williams and Dermody, Marie Loontina, Vervalin and Robinson, Delmore and Darrel, Fred and Annie Priot, and Baby Owen 1-6. Good houses; attractions A1.

ELMIRA, N. Y.—Family (G. W. Middleton, mgr.): Capacity houses continued during the second week of this new house 1-6. A strong bill included Richards, the Nellos, Ida Russell, Mills and Beecher, Mahoney and Lake, and Harte and Dennete.——Ritalto (F. W. McConnell, mgr.): Lewis and Chapin, the Zimmermans, Norman, May Milburn, Marie Evans, Helen Clifford, and Madge Daytelle 1-6. Large business.

VAUDEVILLE JOTTINGS.

Thomas Q. Seabrooke and Pauline Hall are booked to make their joint vaudeville reappearance at the Family Theatre, Scranton, Pa., this week. Their co. includes John Peruglini, Harry Stuart, Kate Gardner, Billy Morton and Charles Winston.

Julia Romaine has sent a complaint to The Mirror concerning a woman pirate that she alleges has stolen her sketch, My American Girl, written by Tom Fitch, author of Reaping the Harvest. Miss Romaine has copyrighted her play and feels that a great injustice is being done her by the pirate and the managers of the theatres in the West in which she is presenting it.

Frederic Melville has arrived in Australia, and reports that La Motogirl has more than duplicated her American and European success in Sydney. She is being billed very heavily, and her act is the talk of the city.

Frank Clifford, who has been connected with Corse Payton's stock company, in Brooklyn, for the past two seasons, resigned his position last week, and will enter vaudeville shortly. He has secured a dramatic sketch entitled The Westerner, from the pen of Anthony E. Wills, which he will use as his vehicle.

J. J. Brott, who used to be proprietor and manager of the Crystal Theatre, in Muskegon, Mich., recently sold his interests in that house, and has gone to Montreal to manage the Palace Vaudeville Theatre.

St. Joseph, Mo., has a new theatre called the Curd, which was opened Sept. 30. It has been leased by the Crystal management, as the old Crystal was too small to accommodate the crowds that came to see the performances.

J. H. Sherman, of Lake City, Ia., has brought suit against Gollmar Bros. for $5,000 damages for injuries sustained in a wreck while in their employ in 1905. Sherman maintains that while employed by Gollmar Bros. as an elephant trainer he was permanently injured in a wreck and that as the Gollmars owned the circus train and employed him he holds them for the damages.

Harry D'Esta and Morris Boom opened their new Family Theatre at Chester, Pa., yesterday afternoon. It is located at West Seventh street and the Bridge, and is the old Harmonia Hall reconstructed. The house has an orchestra, balcony, gallery and 4 boxes, and seats 1,400. It will be run in connection with the D'Esta-Boom Circuit, which includes theatres in Pittston, Pottsville, Hamilton, Carbondale, Woonsocket, Milford, Athol, Ashland, South Hanson, and other cities.

Manager Meade of the Richmond Theatre, North Adams, Mass., announced a few days ago that the house had been leased to John B. Morris and Co., of New York, who will conduct it as a high-class vaudeville resort. B. M. Taylor, of New York, will be the local manager. Possession will be given October 15. Three performances a day will be the rule. Mr. Meade has been connected with North Adams' theatricals for twelve years. He has not decided as to what he will do in the future.

Resident Manager Lovenberg, of Keith's Theatre, Providence, has a messenger system that has proven a great convenience for his patrons. Those who have not the time to call at the theatre for tickets, have simply to call up the box office and the tickets are sent immediately by messenger boys, who deliver them and collect the money. This accommodation means a good many more dollars every

Pretty good notice last week, eh?—well, here's another:

You know I get these notices right along—got them last season, too. It's an old idea—using newspaper notices in advertising—but I haven't any better one this week. We are in Pittsburg this week—at the Bijou Theatre. Next week, Canton, Ohio; Beaver Falls, Pa.; Youngstown, O.; Newcastle Pa. Titusville, Pa.; Warren, Pa.—JAMES A. BLISS, Somewhat Stout Comedian, with HENRY E DIXEY in "THE MAN ON THE BOX."

PLAYWRITING

FIFTH YEAR

BY MAIL. MONTHLY PAYMENTS.

There are Schools for the teaching of painting, music and other arts. Playwriting is an art. Can you give any sane reason why it cannot be taught? This was the first School of the kind to be established in the world, and it proposes, as it expands, to remain THE first.

SIR HENRY IRVING: "You may be the mightiest genius that ever breathed, but if you have not studied the ART of writing for the stage you will never write a good acting play."

MR. THOMAS DIXON, JR., a man of genius, open minded and clear sighted, author of "THE CLANSMAN," a play that is turning people away at every performance throughout the South, kindly writes: "I learned more from your course in one year than I could have gotten in ten years unaided. It is new, not found in books, thorough and practical. The student of the drama who neglects this course is missing the opportunity of a life. I could never have written 'THE CLANSMAN' without the grasp of principles I got from you. Our association has been an inspiration to me from the first." Circular. Address
